TELLS OF F. D. R. PLAN OF WORLD POLICE IN 1941

U. S., Britain Would Have Manned It

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18—An international police force manned solely by the United States and Great Britain was proposed by the late President Roosevelt in the summer of 1941 as the mechanism to keep world peace, secret memoranda placed before the Pearl Harbor committee showed today.

The memoranda consisted of notes taken by Sumner Welles, former under-secretary of state, at the Roosevelt-Churchill meeting at sea in August, 1941, in which Welles participated. The documents, covering conversations between the two leaders on Aug. 10 and 11, are the fullest first hand account of the "Atlantic Charter" meeting yet made public.

Welles reported that Mr. Roosevelt told Churchill during discussion of the charter on the morning of the 11th aboard the cruiser Augusta, that he [Roosevelt] did not favor creating a world peace organization immediately after the war. Instead, Roosevelt said, the United States and Britain should police the world. No mention was made of Russia as a co-partner, according to Welles' account.

Stand Surprised Welles

Welles further reported that this stand by the President "surprised" and "discouraged" him, and that he urged upon Mr. Roosevelt the necessity for a world league of nations where smaller powers in South America and Europe could have a voice.

Roosevelt replied, the memo said, that this objection could be solved thru the "ostensible" joining of the other powers with Britain and the United States, but that the latter two nations would have to undertake the police powers.

The discussion arose in the Roosevelt-Churchill conversation the morning of Aug. 11, Welles reported, when Churchill proposed that the President agree to include support of an "effective international organization" in the section of the Atlantic Charter dealing with disarmament of aggressor nations. [This was nearly four months before the United States was drawn into the war.]

F. D. R. Didn't Agree

"The President replied [to Churchill]," Welles' report said, "that he did not feel he could agree to this because of the suspicions and opposition that such a statement would create in the United States.

"He said that he himself would not be in favor of the creation of a new assembly of the league of nations, at least until after a period of time had transpired and during which an international police force composed of the United States and Great Britain had had an opportunity of functioning."

Churchill told Roosevelt that the omission of a proposal for a world league from the charter would arouse opposition from "extreme internationalists" but agreed to the omission when the President persisted, the account said.

Welles reported he saw the Presi-

Konoye Says Russia Agreed to Carve East

TOKYO, Dec. 19 [Wednesday] (AP)—Russia in late 1940 agreed "in principle" to join members of the tri-partite alliance in a four-power entente which assigned the eastern world among them, Prince Fumimaro Konoye posthumously disclosed in a special document defending the axis.

Iran and India were to be Russia's "future sphere of influence" under a secret agreement accompanying the proposed entente. Japan was to receive the South Seas area; Germany would have taken central Africa, and Italy northern Africa, said a document released today by Konoye's son, Michitaka. The paper was prepared by his father preceding his suicide, the son said.

Konoye said, however, the plan failed to progress and that three months after the agreement in principle had been reached, German officials openly talked about the inevitability of a nazi-soviet war.

Duped by Berlin

Both he and Japan had been been duped by Berlin's "traiterous" power politics, Konoye said. He added that neither Germany nor Russia seriously attempted to conclude the entente agreement.

"Firstly, the soviet union will declare that it agrees with the principle of the tri-partite pact in the sense of preventing war and swiftly recovering peace.

"Secondly, the soviet union will recognize the leading position of Germany and Italy and Japan, respectively, in the new order in Europe and Asia, and the three nations will pledge respect of soviet territory.

For Spheres of Influence

"Thirdly, the three nations and the soviet union pledge not to assist any nation being the enemy of the other, nor to join such a group of nations."

The plan, in addition, provided a secret agreement on "future spheres of influence."

The Japanese government promptly approved the plan which was handed to Foreign Commissar Molotov of Russia during his Berlin visit. Then Tokyo heard nothing further until March, 1941, when Japanese Foreign Minister Matsuoka visited Berlin.

The latter was told Molotov had agreed in principle, but proposed "exchange conditions of over 30 articles which Germany could in no way recognize."

OFFICIALS DENY 16 ESTONIANS ENTRY TO U. S.

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 18 (AP)—Entrance to the United States was denied today by immigration officials to 16 Estonians who landed here Saturday after sailing their 33 foot sailboat for 129 days across the seas from Stockholm, Sweden, in the hope they could begin anew lives that had been upset by European wars and oppressions.

The group has appealed the action of the immigration authorities in denying them the right of entry, and it is expected that it will be at least several weeks before the United States attorney general, the final authority, will reach a decision. In the meantime all of the Estonians will be paroled.

CITY'S SUBZERO WAVE TEMPERED BY LAKE WINDS

Chicago experienced temporary relief in the cold wave that is gripping the northern third of the United States when winds off Lake Michigan last night drove the mercury to 20 degrees above zero by 10 p. m. Weather bureau officials said the relief was only temporary and near zero temperatures will return by tonight.

The cold weather, expected to continue thru next Sunday, played havoc with train schedules.

BRITON REVAMPS UNRRA; FINDS IT'S A 'ME SS'

FRANKFURT, Germany, Dec. 18 [Reuters]—Lt. Gen. Frederick Morgan, one of the British planners of D-day, has begun a drastic overhaul of his section of the united nations relief and rehabilitation administration which he described today as "a complete mess with neither organization nor discipline."

As one of the first steps in preparing the unwieldy organization to care for 1,000,000 displaced persons this winter, Morgan has called for "two-fisted he-men to sit at the top and push this thing along" and "one of the good American generals" to galvanize the he-men. He has sent a request to President Truman for the general.

The organization, Morgan said, has "grown up backwards." He has also found that with a staff of only 5,000 persons for the whole of Germany, UNRRA is operating on the "thinnest shoestring you ever saw in your life with a transport system which is only a conglomeration of scrap iron without petrol, oil, spare parts, maintenance or supply." He said he wants 1,000 British and 1,000 Americans immediately for field work in Germany.

WESTERN UNION AFL UNION SETS STRIKE FOR JAN. 7

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18 (AP)—The general committee of the Western Union Commercial Telegraphers' union tonight ordered a strike for Jan. 7 to begin at 8 a. m. in each time zone.

The AFL union, which claims 48,000 members in the nation, has demanded a 25 per cent increase in pay and concessions on 12 other issues. Negotiations with the company have been deadlocked since last August, and a vote to strike was returned in balloting conducted by the national labor relations board Dec. 1.

33,217 Yanks Re-Enlist in the European Theater

FRANKFURT, Germany, Dec. 18 (AP)—Lt. Col. M. F. Burke, recruiting officer in the European theater, said today that 33,217 American troops had enlisted in that area. Furloughs home constitute the best selling point in the army recruiting campaign, which was described officially as going well.

Three More Women Linked to Past of 'Bluebeard' Cline

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 18 [Special]—Names of three more women were added to the official investigation of Alfred Leonard Cline's "Bluebeard" trail of death here today as inquiry into the transcontinental maze of Cline's 25 year pursuit of elderly women produced developments in various cities thruout the country.

These developments included:

1. District Atty. Edmund Brown announced he has received information that Cline had a wife who died in Fort Collins, Colo., on April 16, 1925, and that her body was exhumed and removed to Denver three years later without legal authority.

A Nude Body

2. Brown said he has also been informed that in Fort Collins, in the early 1920s, a man named Cline abandoned a wife and two children to elope with a Miss Anna Bell O'Laughlin, 18, whose body a few months later was shipped back nude to her family.

3. San Francisco police called on authorities in Lyons, Kas., to give them information about a Mrs. Sarah Slentz of that city. The inquiry followed the discovery in Cline's effects here of an investment company tax statement addressed to Mrs. Slentz.

4. Attorneys in Columbus, O., studying an inventory of the contents of Cline's safe deposit box in a Columbus bank, discovered that $500 a month annuity insurance payments to Mrs. E. Delora Krebs Cline, former wealthy Chicago widow, were scheduled by the terms of the insurance contract to terminate Nov. 19, 1945. This is significant in view of the fact authorities now believe Mrs. Krebs Cline died in Dallas, Tex., Oct. 17, 1944, altho Cline announced she died in Portland, Ore., on Nov. 29, 1945.

A Florida Case

5. Police in Jacksonville, Fla., where a woman died Nov. 8, 1943, under the name of Elizabeth Hannah Klein, said four persons have identified photographs of Cline as a "Frederick Klein," who posed as a nephew of Mrs. Klein and arranged for her cremation.

Cline, a former convict, is being held in San Francisco as a murder suspect in the death of the woman in Dallas now thought to have been Mrs. Krebs Cline but cremated under the name of Mrs. Alice W. Carpenter, a St. Petersburg, Fla., widow who disappeared with Cline 10 months earlier.

Brown said he has two sources for his information concerning Cline's activities in Fort Collins, Colo. This city had not previously figured in the investigation of Cline's career, heretofore traced back only to 1931.

He named the first source as Henry S. Sherman, chairman of the Colorado public utilities commission and an attorney representing heirs of Mrs. Van Sickle Cline, one of Cline's early wives, who died in 1933.

Sherman wrote to Brown that Cline met the former Mrs. Van Sickle in Fort Collins and that Cline had previously lived in Fort Collins with a wife whose death April 16, 1925, was recorded on a death certificate as due to pneumonia.

Sherman said he inquired into circumstances of this death and discovered the body had been exhumed in 1928 at Cline's orders and without application to or a permit from the city registrar, as required by law. He said the body apparently was shipped to Denver.

Letter from Doctor

Fort Collins was again brought into the case, Brown said, when he received a letter today from Dr. Norah R. Miller, now of Ripley, Cal., but formerly of Ft. Collins.

This letter described "a man named Cline" who operated a men's clothing store in Fort Collins in the early 1920s. Dr. Miller said she recalls that this man left a wife and two children to elope with an 18 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis O'Laughlin.

The girl, Anna Bell O'Laughlin, was never again seen by her parents, Dr. Miller said, and a few months later they got word from "Cline" that she had died. The parents asked for the body and it was shipped to them nude, the letter stated, and the parents never received her clothing or expensive jewelry she was wearing when she went away.

An Insurance Contract

The insurance contract of the former Mrs. Krebs, examined in Columbus, was believed by police to supply a motive for the pretense that the wealthy former Chicago woman did not die until after the final $500 instalment due under it had been paid. Attorneys for the Krebs estate in Chicago have charged that signatures on the insurance annuity checks were forged for a year prior to her supposed death.

The contract, which was with the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, originally called for the payment to Mrs. Krebs of $59,132.90. It provided for an initial payment of $1,632.90 and payments of $500 a month for 116 months.

YANKS WAITING FOR TRAINS JAM COASTAL PORTS

Forced to Remain on Board Ships

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 18 [Special]—Hopes of getting home for Christmas were dimming tonight for thousands of soldiers and sailors here and in other west coast ports, as backlogs of homeward bound service men piled up in staging areas and aboard incoming ships due to lack of transportation.

The tremendous volume of troops arriving here in recent days and scheduled to arrive in the days remaining before Christmas has proved far greater than can be handled by all available forms of transportation, including trains, planes, buses, and ships, it was officially admitted.

A survey disclosed that 45,000 men are in the San Francisco area ready to move east or are being processed, 27,000 in the Los Angeles area, 17,000 at Seattle, and 4,500 at Portland, Ore.

110,700 More Due

The army announced in Washington that schedules call for the arrival of an additional 110,700 troops before Dec. 25, and predicted that unless the rail jam clears up an estimated 82,000 soldiers from the Pacific will have to spend Christmas in their ports of debarkation.

The army statement said that as of last midnight 35,000 soldiers had been waiting more than 48 hours for eastern trains.

The navy also announced in Washington that many of its men scheduled for discharge or leave will be in the same fix, but gave no figures.

Staging areas were reported filled to capacity here and in Seattle. Last night troops remained aboard their ships in the harbor here because there was no room to accommodate them ashore, it was said, and five ships were expected to be used for this purpose tonight.

Old Equipment Blamed

The office of Col. Earle R. Sailes, commanding officer at Camp Anza, a staging area near Riverside, said antiquated equipment was contributing to delay in transporting veterans from the harbor to the camp.

A report from Seattle said 11 overseas craft were anchored in Puget Sound waiting for space in staging areas to become available. Some men have been sent east from Seattle on Canadian railroads, it was said, and others have started hitch-hiking.

All railroads west of the Mississippi have been ordered by the office of defense transportation to move troop trains and empty troop cars "just as fast as they do their regular passengers trains," it was announced.

Ironically enough, it was said, the army has been referring to its big scale movement of troops from the Pacific to this country this month as "operation Santa Claus."

FIFTY SHIPS IDLE AT SAIPAN WHILE GIs MARK TIME

HONOLULU, T. H., Dec. 18 (AP)—More than 50 merchant ships that have been waiting for months in Saipan's Tanapag harbor for unloading orders are costing United States taxpayers more than half a million dollars monthly, the army newspaper, Stars and Stripes, said today. A war shipping administration official in Honolulu, however, said the tieup was just a "logistic hangover" of the amphibious struggle against Japan.

"Vessels swing tantalizingly at anchor here [Saipan] while GIs slowly sweat out stateside transportation," wrote two Stars and Stripes reporters, Tech. 5th Grade Dickie Moore, former Hollywood child film star, and Sgt. Martin Rakitt.

They knew it only as XX.

Thousands of war workers who were building it at the Zenith Radio corporation had no idea what they were making or why it was so called. It was the potent secret weapon—the variable time proximity fuse—the only war time research project that shared equal priority with the atomic bomb.

This was disclosed by Eugene F. McDonald Jr., president of the company, in the current issue of the Cherry Circle, publication of the Chicago Athletic association.

The reason it was dubbed XX—the double cross—was because the fuse, which caused bombs, rockets, and trench mortar shells to explode from 10 to 300 feet from the target, used alnico, a potent alloy of aluminum, nickel, and copper invented by a Japanese. Thus, a weapon, discovered by the Japs, was effectively used against them, instead of vice versa.

Powerful Magnetic Quality

Alnico, developed and patented by Prof. Kushichi Mishima in Japan in 1936, has powerful magnetic qualities which commended it for use in the little rotors of the generator powering the fuse. The fuse, about as big as a pint milk bottle, emits high frequency waves which are reflected from the target, radar fashion.

A similar fuse, battery powered, developed for the navy, was used to make gun fire more effective. The proximity fuse was used with devastating effect at Okinawa, driving the Japs underground.

These fuses, attached to various missiles, made it impossible for human life to continue above the surface of the ground, McDonald stated, and after a relatively small number of attacks made the skies almost 100 per cent safe from enemy aircraft fire.

Planned to Blast Jap Coast

"Preceding V-J day our entire output of fuses was being flown to the Pacific while our forces prepared for the invasion of Japan proper," McDonald said. "The plan called for blasting the invasion point of continental Japan with 30,000 500-pound bombs which would destroy every vestige of life above the ground thruout this area.

"Because of the impossibility of protecting the entire Japanese coast with caves and underground emplacements it was believed that this pre-invasion bombardment would enable our troops to land with minimum losses."

The fuse, which used tiny inch long, pencil thin tubes, will have peace time applications.

Important in Many Ways

"The compact design that necessity forced upon us," said McDonald, "the use of tiny hearing aid size tubes and parts that made it possible to mount an entire unit in the space used by a single large pre-war radio tube, will give us tiny radionic devices for use where small size is of great importance. The first and most obvious application will be in personal radios, but the same principle will apply in many devices as yet unborn."

Radar, which saved Britain so well against Hitler's bombers and

MEASURE WINS DESPITE SOME GRIM WARNINGS

White House to Get Bill Quickly

BY WILLARD EDWARDS
(Chicago Tribune Press Service)

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18—By an overwhelming vote of 344 to 15, the house today passed the united nations organization bill, which has been labeled a surrender to the President of the constitutional power of congress to declare war.

The measure was sent to conference with the senate, which approved the legislation Dec. 4 by a 65 to 7 vote, for approval of minor amendments. Early senate action is expected to send the bill to the White House for Mr. Truman's signature before the end of the week.

Apathy Is Shown

Only a handful of members spoke in opposition to the measure while apathy marked its supporters. During the three hours of discussion, there were frequently less than 50 of the 435 members present. Many of these read newspapers as the chamber considered one of the historic measures of this century.

No attempt was made by any member to obtain a test vote on the two sections of the bill which delegate immense powers to the President in connection with the use of America's economic and military might to enforce peace thruout the world.

These uncontested provisions empower the President to join with other members of the UNO in applying enforcement measures short of the use of armed force in dealing with disputes between nations. They also authorize him to negotiate military agreements with the security council of the world organization, composed of the United States, Great Britain, China, Russia, and France.

14 Republicans Opposed

Fourteen Republicans voted against the bill. They were Representatives Bradley [Mich.], Buffett [Neb.], Clevenger [O.], Ellis [W. Va.], Hoffman [Mich.], Jones [O.], Mason [Ill.], Pittenger [Minn.], Reed [N. Y.], Rich [Pa.], Robsion [Ky.], Smith [O.], Sumner Ill.], and Winter [Kas.]. They were joined by Rep. Hull [Prog., Wis.], Rep. O'Konski [R., Wis.] voted "present."

Supporters of the bill, led by Chairman Bloom [D., N. Y.] of the foreign affairs committee, argued that it was merely a fulfilment of pledges made at the San Francisco conference where the united nations charter was drawn up.

Fear and doubt that the international organization actually would prevent war was voiced by others, including both Republicans and Democrats, who announced their intention of voting for the legislation. It offered, they said, the only path to peace and was worth a trial.

Rep. Sumner's Warning

Rep. Jessie Sumner, in one of the most outspoken speeches against the bill, predicted it would "involve the United States and American boys in wars everywhere thruout the world." Our troops, she said, would be employed to enforce slavery in subject nations and would be required to shoot down "peoples who prefer death to slavery."

"We are voting our man power into bloodshed for the preservation of the British Empire and soviet communism," declared Rep. Smith. "We are giving our chief executive the essence of dictatorship, which is the power to declare war."

Numerous speakers confessed their misgivings concerning the veto power given each member of the security council to nullify the use of armed force by UNO in any international dispute.

Rep. Luce's Comment

Rep. Luce [R., Conn.] remarked that it was only "common sense" to realize that the use of armed force would be infrequent. None of the Big Five would permit armed force to be used against itself, she said, and economic sanctions would be enough in the case of small nations.

"Congress will never again have the power to declare war," warned Rep. Robsion, "because we will be at war before we know it without a declaration. There is shooting going on now all over the world."

"This has been labeled 'The Great Adventure!'" noted Rep. Hoffman. "It is, but no senator or representative will ever bear arms at the orders of the security council. None of us will ever pay the price. We should keep ourselves the strongest nation in the world, sit back and say to quarreling nations that we will always defend the weak against unjust aggression."

Certain Stipulations

Congress must approve the military agreements entered into by the President with UNO, under the bill, but thereafter he may act under such agreements to make available troops and military equipment to the security council without authorization of congress. If additional military forces or facilities are required beyond the troops and equipment furnished under the agreements, congressional approval must again be obtained.

The bill also authorizes the President to appoint a United States delegate to the security council. He shall have ambassadorial rank and a $20,000 yearly salary. He also appoints five United States representatives and five alternates to the general assembly of the UNO. They will receive $12,000 salaries.

A house amendment permits appointment of senators and representatives to the general assembly with the proviso that they shall receive only their congressional salaries during the period they serve. The President may also appoint any government official to act, without additional compensation.

KENT OFFERS TO TESTIFY AT HAWAII INQUIRY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18—Tyler Kent, former attache at the American embassy in London, who was convicted and imprisoned in England during the war for violation of the British war secrets act, is ready to testify before the Pearl Harbor investigating committee, he informed Chairman Barkley, [D., Ky.], today.

Noting press reports that he was expected to testify before the committee, Kent wrote Barkley from his home here that he has remained ready since his return to the United States from England last Dec. 3 to give any information he may possess to any official body.

"I shall gladly submit any of the facts with which I happened to become familiar in Europe," he wrote Barkley.

Persistent reports have linked Kent with the decoding of correspondence between the late President Roosevelt and former Prime Minister Churchill during the period before Pearl Harbor. Members of congress have asked whether this correspondence indicated Roosevelt-Churchill agreements to wage war against Germany before the Japanese attack drew us into the war.

U. S. and Britain Would Have Supplied Force

dent alone after a second conference with Churchill was concluded that afternoon. It was then that Welles expressed his dismay at Roosevelt's apparent position that "nothing could be more futile than the reconstitution of a body such as the assembly of the league of nations." Welles proposed a world league to include smaller nations.

Roosevelt, the memorandum continued, then said he fully agreed with Welles, and had only meant that a world assembly could not function effectively during the "transition period" immediately following the war.

"The President said," Welles reported, "that he felt a solution for this difficulty could probably be found thru the ostensible joining with Great Britain and the United States of those [smaller] powers, but it would have to be recognized that it would be ostensible since none of the nations mentioned would have the practical means of taking any effective or, at least, considerable part in the task involved."

Warned of Reaction

The undersecretary said he further warned Mr. Roosevelt that the Atlantic charter might be viewed as meaning the President was ready to take the United States into war. Welles said he told the chief executive that "isolationists" might interpret the disarmament section of the charter as meaning Roosevelt would go to war to disarm Germany, Japan, or even Russia, if the soviets "once more" embarked on aggression.

The President replied, the account said, that the "realism" in the disarmament section would be apparent to the American people, and that they would enthusiastically support the need for disarming aggressor countries.

Welles' report also disclosed that Mr. Roosevelt agreed at the sea meeting to have United States forces occupy Azores Islands, held by Portugal, as a means of assuring they would not be seized by Germany.

British Couldn't Help

This was decided at the morning conference of the 11th, when Churchill told Roosevelt new military plans would not permit Britain to carry out its commitment to Portugal to defend the Azores.

Churchill said the British had decided, Welles reported, on a highly secret operation to occupy the Spanish held Canary Islands off Northwest Africa about Sept. 15, 1941, hence, Churchill said, Britain could not take over the Azores.

As a result, the President agreed, immediately upon approval of the plan by Portugal, the memorandum continued, to "send the necessary forces of occupation to the Azores and that the Brazilian government would be simultaneously requested to send at least a token force to take part in the expedition."

Marshall Story Recalled

Previous testimony by Gen. Marshall, then army chief of staff, has disclosed the army planned to move into the Azores in 1941 before we were at war, but the operation was not carried out.

Churchill told Roosevelt, according to Welles, that British occupation of the Canary Islands would almost surely mean an attack by Spain. The prime minister explained, however, that the situation in Spain was going from bad to worse for Britain anyway, and that he expected Hitler to occupy both Spain and Portugal and render Gibraltar untenable, if the Russian army collapsed or was stalemated during the winter.

Churchill also told Roosevelt Britain planned to occupy Portugal's Cape Verde Islands in the Atlantic, with a view to turning them over to United States forces when they were ready to take them.

Talked of Warning Japs

Welles' memoranda dealt at length with the so-called "parallel declaration" of the Americans, British, and Dutch against Japan which Roosevelt and Churchill drafted as a proposed warning from the two governments against further Jap aggression in the far east.

At the meeting on the morning of Aug. 11, Welles reported that Roosevelt agreed to call in the Japanese ambassador when he returned to Washington, and deliver a blunt statement. The account said Roosevelt promised to demand that Japan withdraw its troops from French Indo-China, and to say that, if this was not done, the United States would have to take action which might result in war with Japan.

Records show that Roosevelt did deliver a warning to the Jap ambassador six days later at the White House. Welles told the committee previously that the warning was considerably "watered down," however, from what was discussed with Churchill.

Another feature of the conferences, according to Welles, was Churchill's statement that he could not subscribe immediately to a promise that all peoples would have access to world markets and raw materials. He raised the point that this collided with the empire preference system and that he would have to consult the dominions.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18—Disclosure that the Japanese as early as May, 1941, that the United States government was intercepting and decoding Japanese communications opened a new line of reasoning today at the congressional investigation of the Pearl Harbor disaster.

Vice Adm. Wilkinson

Vice Adm. T. S. Wilkinson, chief of naval intelligence at the time of the Pearl Harbor attack, told the committee of the German warning to the Japanese of our code breaking activities and of Japan's subsequent warning to her diplomatic and consular agents to be cautious.

"If this indicates our code breaking was not so secret, maybe we had better revise our whole estimate of this proceeding," asserted Sen. Brewster [R., Me.] whose questioning had elicited the information from Wilkinson. Brewster added he understood five messages had been intercepted in May and June, 1941, bearing on the Japanese suspicion we were reading her diplomatic communications.

Suspects "Planted" Messages

Later, Brewster told reporters Wilkinson's testimony raised the question of whether the mass of Japanese war-like messages, which we were freely intercepting immediately prior to Pearl Harbor, were "planted" by the Japanese to test our readiness for war. He referred particularly to a Japanese warning to her agents that after Nov. 29, 1491, things were "automatically going to happen."

That day passed without incident.

Discussion of Wilkinson's statement brought out the surprising fact that Committee Counsel William D. Mitchell had told Sen. Ferguson [R., Mich.] a month ago that there was no indication the Japanese ever knew we had broken any of their codes.

Ferguson read a memorandum from Mitchell, dated Nov. 17, in which the counsel said, "Evidence is to the contrary," in reply to a request from Ferguson for information on reported Japanese suspicions of our code breaking.

"This raises the question of whether the services are giving us information of vital importance," Ferguson declared. "Are we getting the coöperation of the services? Or are we getting just what they want to give us?"

Individual Inquiries Banned

Brewster recalled that individual members of the committee have been barred, by vote of the Democratic majority on the committee, from making individual searches of government files for Pearl Harbor information.

"I'm wondering what the significance of this is," said Mitchell.

"It is this," said Brewster, "If what the admiral says is correct, the navy has not been giving you complete or accurate information. I've been considering this in your wandering thru a governmental maze which is far different from that in which you formerly served in Washington."

[Mitchell, who is 71, was attorney general in the Hoover cabinet. Brewster has called him a "gentleman of the old school," who is unable to cope with the complexities of present day Washington.]

Brewster said that in the light of Wilkinson's testimony, he could not understand the emphasis placed on the fact that Gov. Dewey knew of the code breaking secret during the 1944 presidential campaign and that Gen. Marshall felt it necessary to warn him not to reveal it. Sen. Lucas [D., Ill.] has announced he intends to find out who revealed the secret to Dewey.

Quizzed on Kimmel

Questioning of Wilkinson today dealt largely with the failure of the navy department to keep Adm. Kimmel, navy commander at Pearl Harbor, informed of diplomatic negotiations and intercepted Japanese messages which might have warned him of Japanese intentions and led him to have his command prepared for a surprise attack.

Wilkinson estimated, under questioning by Lucas, that had Kimmel been warned shortly before the Japanese attack, his battleships and major vessels could have put to sea at 10 minute intervals. Destroyers and other small vessels could have left simultaneously, he said.

Yesterday Wilkinson testified he had urged Adm. Stark, chief of naval operations, on the morning of Dec. 7, 1941, to send a warning to Kimmel, but evidence shows it never was sent.

Kimmel Protest Read

According to Wilkinson's estimates, if Kimmel had received a warning as little as two hours before the attack, the Hawaiian commander could have put 12 major ships and 12 to 14 smaller vessels to sea where they could have maneuvered to escape Jap bombs and torpedoes.

In connection with the paucity of information sent Kimmel, Gerhard Gesell, assistant committee counsel, read into the record a letter from Kimmel to Stark in May, 1941, in which Kimmel complained of his "difficult position" in being so far removed from the seat of government and therefore not informed on policy and international developments that might affect his command.

Kimmel wrote that it was difficult to combine fleet training with the necessity of keeping his fleet constantly ready to assume new strategical positions necessitated by the situation in the Pacific. He suggested that keeping fleet commanders constantly informed of new developments be made a "cardinal principle."

Some Data Withheld

In a February, 1941, letter to Stark, Kimmel said he had heard from an officer recently arrived from Washington that naval intelligence considered it the function of naval operations to keep commanders informed of secret matters and that naval operations thought it was the responsibility of naval intelligence.

Wilkinson said today that a "substantial amount" of diplomatic information was sent Kimmel in biweekly summaries from naval intelligence, but that in order to protect the code breaking secret his office was careful not to include information derived from Japanese intercepts. He explained that if the Japanese were breaking our codes they would be able to determine that the source of our information was their own code messages.

Rep. Gearhart [R., Cal.] asked Wilkinson why Kimmel had not been told Japanese spies were sending detailed accounts to Tokyo of fleet movements at Pearl Harbor, based on a previously arranged code for designating particular areas of the naval base.

Powerless to Stop It

"All commanders knew their activities were under constant espionage," said Wilkinson. "They were aware that the results of that espionage were being sent to Tokyo. . . . We were powerless to stop it."

Wilkinson admitted, however, that detailed information on the Japanese agents' reports to Tokyo would have had "more immediate application" for Kimmel than for the naval intelligence office in Washington.

Asked if the lessons learned from the attack on Pearl Harbor and the events leading up to it would be applied in future naval operations, Wilkinson said, "I hope so."

"That is one of the main purposes of this investigation," said Brewster.

Cites Contradiction

As Wilkinson concluded his testimony for the day, Brewster remarked to reporters that the admiral told the Roberts commission which investigated Pearl Harbor that Adm. Kimmel had all the information naval intelligence in Washington possessed. In his testimony to the congressional group, Wilkinson said Kimmel did not have access to the Japanese intercepts.

Brewster call this such an obvious conflict that it may have "influenced" the decision of the Roberts commission to "convict" Kimmel. This group found that Kimmel and Lt. Gen. Short, the Hawaiian commanders, did not alert their commands sufficiently.

MacArthur Gathers Data

Testimony that the Japanese learned thru intercepted United States radio messages what warships were at Pearl Harbor was laid before the committee in the form of information sent from Gen. MacArthur's headquarters in Tokyo. The information was to the effect that the enemy had alternate plans to smash the United States fleet if it was anchored outside Pearl Harbor; and that orders went to the Japanese navy to prepare for the attack as early as Nov. 9; assuming war with Britain, the United States, and the Netherlands was "inevitable" and would come "the first part of December."

This information was obtained by MacArthur's staff in questioning Japanese prisoners after the fall of Japan. Much of it came from Comdr. Tomo Tachibana or the Japanese naval intelligence staff, reconstructed from memory.

Whether the Japanese actually had cracked a United States radio code as theirs had been cracked was not made clear.

Fleet Makeup Known

The documents from MacArthur's headquarters were based on the conjecture of the Japanese officer interviewed because the key officer at Pearl Harbor had died and important papers were burned at the time of surrender.

Tachibana informed Col. F. P. Munson of MacArthur's staff about the intercepted United States broadcast on the number of battleships, cruisers, destroyers, and others entering Pearl Harbor or anchored there. He did not give any more details of this broadcast, but added that the Japanese got information also from signals to American ships.

The Japanese said the naval intelligence division at Tokyo had "a most difficult time judging the habits and strength of the American fleet.

JUDGES HECKLE U. S. LAWYER AT WAR CRIME TRIAL

Cast Doubts on Guilt of Nazi Small Fry

NUERNBERG, Germany, Dec. 18 (AP)—Openly irritated judges on the international war crimes tribunal heckled American prosecutors today over the abundance of documentary evidence. They cast doubts on parts of the United States' case against lower level nazi groups which the prosecution seeks to convict along with the 21 top nazi leaders.

Justice Robert H. Jackson's staff completed the case against the nazi party leadership corps. But numerous questions from the bench indicated that the judges thought knowledge of the over-all nazi program of domination and extermination did not filter down into lower elements of the corps as the prosecution charged.

As Assistant Prosecutor Robert G. Storey took up the case against the nazi cabinet, British Justice Geoffrey Lawrence, presiding, complained that the bulk of the evidence Col. Storey offered was cumulative.

Sharp Interruptions

When Storey started reading a list of those who participated in nazi cabinet defense council meetings, American Justice Francis J. Biddle inquired caustically: "What will that show?"

The prosecution said it would show the roles of the accused in issuing decrees. Biddle queried again: "And what will that show?"

Two more sharp interruptions came from Lawrence, who said the prosecution was laboring to prove obvious facts and that the question was: "What is the criminality of reich cabinet acts?"

Storey discarded part of his script and plunged into the process of nazi law making, only to be interrupted by Lawrence, who demanded:

"And what does that have to do with the criminality of the reich cabinet? . . . I think the tribunal can take it as evidence that the cabinet, before passing laws, consulted somebody."

Americans' Lone Effort

The present phase of the trial—that of presenting evidence against the principal nazi organizations—has been one of the hottest legal problems of the trial, with the Americans standing alone in an effort to punish a half million or more nazi underlings for their part in the vast party program of persecution and extermination.

Storey had just started prosecution of the brown shirt storm troopers [S. A.] when the court adjourned for the day. From his great wealth of documents Storey introduced a series of pictures of Hitler, Goering, and others in S. A. uniforms and brought another caustic comment from Lawrence, who asked whether there was "any doubt that Hitler and Goering were members of the S. A."

Turning to evidence that nazi gauleiters led the campaign to confiscate church property, Storey read an elite guard [S. S.] report that "all real estate owned by the churches is being claimed by the local gau [district] administration."

Cites Attack on Church

Storey charged that Defendant Alfred Rosenberg, official philosopher of the nazi party, and Martin Bormann, Hitler's missing deputy who is being tried in absentia, were the leaders in the nazi attack on the church. Storey produced a directive from Bormann to Rosenberg for closing 11 Roman Catholic theological schools.

Rosenberg and Goering were described as common thieves who had vied with each other in stealing works of art from helpless, conquered peoples.

Chief Justice Harold G. Ward in Criminal court yesterday continued until today a hearing on a petition for a writ of habeas corpus for the release of a woman giving her name as Mary Winters, 23, of Los Angeles, Cal., who refused to tell police how she had been shot in the left leg. She was ordered held without bail and was returned to Bridewell hospital. She was arrested Sunday after a physician found her in front of his office at 3424 Sheffield av.

Attorneys Michael Brodkin and George Bieber attempted to effect her release yesterday, but the woman, wearing an expensive fur coat over her County hospital dress, refused to give further information in court.

Capt. Frank Reynolds of Town Hall police said her fingerprints are being traced.

EX-MINISTER PROTESTS GAG AT FINN TRIAL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

HELSINKI, Finland, Dec. 18—Prevented by the tribunal from reading aloud war time pronouncements of present Finnish leaders, Vaino Tanner, former finance minister, today protested at the war responsibility trial against curtailment of his right to defend himself.

The tribunal told Tanner he could submit documents for inclusion in the record. Tanner refused to compromise, declaring that such procedure nullified his evidence.

Meanwhile, it was announced that President Mannerheim was about to leave Portugal for Paris, where he was expected to spend Christmas before going home. There had been speculation that the aged field marshal, who guided his country's battles against Russia, would never dare return to Finland.

DISCLOSE TOJO SHELVED 2 TOP JAP GENERALS

BY DONALD STARR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

TOKYO, Dec. 18—War time Premier Hideki Tojo's passion for complete domination of Japanese affairs cost Japan the services of two of her ablest generals when they were needed most because they were becoming too popular.

Investigation of the circumstances leading to the recall of Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, who blitzed the British out of Burma and Singapore, as well as the military retirement of Lt. Gen. Masaharu Homma after his successes on Luzon and Corregidor in 1942 revealed that both clashed with the so-called Tojo gang.

Sidetrack Yamashita

According to Japanese military writers, Yamashita was recalled and sent off to an obscure post in Manchuria. They insist that his popularity and ability made him unacceptable to Tojo.

The "Tiger of Malaya" did not enter the military scene again until a few days before the American landings on Leyte. Yamashita was sent to Manila to take charge of defenses. Japanese war correspondents declare that he was loathe to accept the post because he knew as well as Tojo that Japan was beaten. They credit him with being the ablest strategist in the military history of Japan.

While Yamashita awaits execution and Homma trial in Manila as war criminals, the facts surrounding the latter's recall from the Philippines after victory on Corregidor are coming to light. While Homma was not militarily as sound as Yamashita, he was considered more intelligent.

Homma Writes in Cell

For weeks until Homma was flown to Manila to stand trial for the infamous "death march" he sat in a Sugami prison cell writing what was believed to be a brief for his defense.

Homma was sent into the Philippines campaign because of his knowledge of the English language. Tojo apparently believed that an English speaking commander would have advantages in the islands where Americans had established a school system.

Altho it is said of Homma that he entered the war against the United States with some doubt of eventual success, his victories climaxed with the capture of the "Rock" in Manila bay convinced him Japan was invincible.

This change of heart at least is partly ascribed to the fact that he actually believed the Japanese "greater east Asia co-prosperity sphere" propaganda line and sought to put it into practice from his Manila headquarters.

Both Yamashita and Homma were replaced by Tojo cohorts. Field Marshal Count Juichi Terauchi, who was sent to Burma when Yamashita was "exiled" to Manchuria, was a former war minister and son of a former war minister. Lt. Gen. Shizuichi Tanaka succeeded Homma in the Philippines.

AMERICANS ASK TRUSTEESHIP FOR MANCHURIA

Officers Suggest Plan as Best for Area

BY JOSEPH HEARST
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

SHANGHAI, China, Dec. 18—On the eve of Gen. Marshall's arrival in China as the new United States' ambassador it was learned today that some high ranking army officers believe it would be wise to place Manchuria under trusteeship until China's central government is soundly established.

[Gen. Marshall arrived in Manila today, two and a half hours ahead of schedule, en route to China. He immediately left on a tour of the ruined city. He plans to leave for China tomorrow morning.]

Under their proposal, which has been submitted to Washington, D. C., soviet Russia, Great Britain, France, and possibly the Netherlands would assume the task of policing Manchuria, establishing local government, and directing the resumption of work. Proponents of this plan also envision a similar trusteeship for Korea.

Hint Chiang Wouldn't Approve

It is believed the plan has not been discussed with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. American observers here indicate the generalissimo would not take kindly to the proposal.

If a trusteeship were established in Manchuria the psychological factors involved would undoubtedly react to the disadvantage of the generalissimo and the central government. Enemies of the generalissimo undoubtedly would assert that such a step indicated the central government was incapable of handling its own affairs in the northeast provinces.

See Test for UNO

At this time central government troops are trying to bring Manchuria under their banner and two Chinese armies are near Mukden prepared to enter when Russian forces withdraw.

The plan's proponents argue that the Manchurian problem offers an excellent opportunity to discover whether the united nations organization is really going to work for world peace.

U. S. FLAG RISES AGAIN ON CHICHI AFTER 117 YEARS

PEARL HARBOR, T. H., Dec. 18 (AP)—For the first time in 117 years the Stars and Stripes wave over Chichi Island, a former Japanese fortress and seaplane base in the Bonin Islands.

Marines went ashore five days ago to occupy the island and accept the surrender of Lt. Gen. Hoshio Tachibana and his garrison, fleet headquarters reported today.

The American flag first flew over Chichi in 1828, when Nathaniel Savory of Massachusetts raised it as a warning to pirates.

RETAIN EMPEROR IS FIRST PLANK OF 2 JAP PARTIES

TOKYO, Dec. 19 [Wednesday]—(AP)—Japan's two major political parties today listed preservation of the emperor system as the first plank in their platforms for the forthcoming elections. The numerically small Communist party is the only political organization advocating its abolition.

Chuji Machida, 82 year old parliamentarian, was chosen president of the dominant Progressive party. If his party captures a majority in the house of representatives as expected, Machida may name the next Japanese premier.

Meanwhile, the government, in a statement on the dissolution of the diet, voiced the expectation that "the general will of the people will be completely embodied into the results of the coming general election," and promised to refrain from any action which might indicate official interference in balloting.

The diet, its members displaying unfamiliarity with democratic processes, ended a 22 day extraordinary session yesterday.

Gen. MacArthur granted the government permission to borrow money to buy rice, charcoal and firewood.

GEN. CHENNAULT BARES REBUKE BY CHINA'S BOSS

Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault, organizer of the famous Flying Tigers and later in command of the 14th United States air force in China, last night told Illinois members of the National Society of Colonial Dames of America in Orchestra hall that China would have waged a 100 year war against Japan if necessary.

Chennault said that in 1940, when he heard much of peace rumors and encountered difficulty in organizing his volunteer group, he went to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek with his troubles, determined to resign, but was chided by the Chinese leader for his impatience.

Gov. Green paid tribute to the air commander, describing him as "more of a father than a general" to the men under his command; five of Gen. Chennault's sons were in World War II. and one served under the general. Six former Flying Tigers were seated on the stage with Gen. Chennault.

CHIANG BACKS UP TRUMAN'S PLANS FOR CHINA UNITY

CHUNGKING, China, Dec. 18 (AP)—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek said today President Truman's recent statement urging peace and unity in China showed a "very clear understanding" of the situation.

Chiang said that he hoped to achieve "a peaceful and cordial settlement" with the Chinese Communists, and that a broadening of the base of China's government would be one of the purposes of the national assembly convoked to meet next May.

The generalissimo made these assertions at a press conference held at Peiping just before he and his wife boarded a plane for Nanking. He said that at Nanking or Hankow he would confer with Gen. Marshall, the new American ambassador to China. Marshall was expected to arrive in Shanghai Thursday.

Wife Rephrases Question

Asked if he thought the prospects of national unity had been increased by the arrival of a communist peace delegation in Chungking, the generalissimo replied he had only received word of their arrival and did not yet know what their attitude might be.

When a correspondent asked if Chiang thought Mr. Truman's statement carried the implication that the United States would expect fuller compromise with the Communists Mme. Chiang intervened and rephrased the question for her husband. He then replied:

"What Mr. Truman said is exactly what I have advocated for the last three years. I hope to carry out a peaceful and cordial settlement between the Communist and Kuomintang parties."

The plane which took the generalissimo and Mme. Chiang to Nanking set them down in a city from which Japanese forced them to flee in 1937. Their return today was the occasion for ovations at the airport and along their motor route thru the city—soon to become again China's capital.

Demands Truce

China's No. 2 Communist, here to talk peace with the nation's leaders, said that an end to civil warfare was China's first need and that the seven man delegation he leads would "demand cessation of hostilities."

Gen. Chou En-lai said he would seek a cease fighting agreement before the all-party political consultative council begins its formal session. Failing that, he added, he would insist that a truce be made the first item on the council's agenda. A date for the session has not yet been set.

Chinese press dispatches meanwhile reported "ferocious" fighting in southern Shantung province, where Communists were said to have captured the important town of Tenghsien, between Nanking and Tientsin.

CIVIL SERVICE WAGE INCREASE VOTED IN SENATE

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18 (AP)—A sliding scale pay increase averaging 11 per cent for an estimated 1,100,000 government workers was approved in the senate today and sent to the house.

Sen. Byrd [D., Va.], who backed the measure as a substitute for a more liberal one by Sen. Downey [D., Cal.], said it would offset the increased cost of living for all workers now under classified civil service. He said, however, it covered only about one-third of the 3,000,000-odd government workers.

Not covered by the bill are large groups of postal workers, workers in agencies exempted from classified service, and a large group of employes of the war and navy departments and other war time agencies.

Byrd offered a table which showed that government workers formerly getting $1,440 annually would receive $1,632, or an increase of 13.33%. The rate of the pay boost decreases as salaries mount until workers getting $8,500 would receive $9,067, or a 6.68% increase.

PRIVATE GIFTS TO LEAGUE O. K.? NATIONS DIVIDED

BY WILLIAM FULTON
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, Dec. 18—The united nations preparatory commission today debated whether the new world organization should accept private gifts and then decided wearily shortly before midnight to refer the question to the global general assembly which convenes in London Jan. 10.

The dispute arose over the drawing up of a legal agreement with the United States as host nation. Sponsors of the new world organization hope to get land free and possibly the building for their international zone permanent headquarters.

P. J. Noel-Baker, United Kingdom delegate and British minister of state, argued in favor of acceptance of gifts since this had been the practice of the old league of nations.

Recalls Rockefeller Gift

"Rockefeller gave a large parcel of land to the league of nations," Noel-Baker recalled. "He gave the secretary-general's home and built a large, costly library."

The Netherlands delegate, A. Pelt, strongly opposed the idea.

"We have good reason to reflect on this question," asserted Pelt. "We are going to a country famous for its hospitality, a country which contains a number of wealthy individuals.

"Sooner or later this organization will meet with financial difficulties. There will be a world crisis. Some countries will not be able to make their contributions. In that case, gifts might influence the minds of the delegates. Gifts might even limit the freedom of choice of a site at the outset."

Control Unthinkable

Noel-Baker said he was sorry to hear the phrase "world crisis" because that was just what the united nations was created to prevent.

"It is unthinkable that the united nations would accept gifts and allow its policy to be controled as a result," he added.

Col. W. R. Hodgson, Australian minister to Paris, said "I visualize gifts not only from individuals, but also from wealthy governments."

"I don't know that we can prevent people from giving land and buildings," remarked Awny El Khalidi, representing Iraq. "It might be called conscience money."

The commission adopted reports of various subcommittees including one which recommended that the economic and social council give first priority to setting up five commissions on human rights, economics and employment, temporary social, statistical, and narcotics questions.

U. S. ZONE BAD? GERMANS DON'T LIKE TO LEAVE IT

Deny Misrule Occurs in American Area

BY HENRY WALES
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

BERLIN, Dec. 18—The best answer to criticism of the behavior of the United States army of occupation and to condemnation of conditions in the American zone is that Germans domiciled there do not want to leave, whereas persons in the Russian, French, and even British zone are continually applying to enter the American area, or are smuggling into our sphere.

Nowhere in the American zone will the residents depart for the Russian area, even tho they have business interests, homes, or relatives there. They likewise are unwilling to transfer to the French area and only such persons as have material reasons for changing their domicile elect to take up residence in the British zone.

It is untrue to assert that Germans in the American zone are drifting toward despair thru maladministration. Factually, the Germans have existed in a state of hopelessness for the last two or three years, since it became evident that the Nazis had lost the war.

Expect Revitalization

The German people are still apathetic, listless, and lacking in volition as cold weather adds another element to their miseries, but there is evidence that once winter is past and a centralized reich government begins to be formed, hope will be reborn and their situation will become less desperate.

Gen. Bryan Milburn, chief of staff for Gen. Lucius Clay, said today: "We admit freely that the United States army is not skilled in civil administration. It was trained as a fighting force, to wage war, and it won that war. Now that the job is finished, most of the officers and men want to go home to take up normal life. But we are obtaining many expert skilled citizens to handle military government posts, and men who proved their ability in America are able to discharge their tasks here."

Milburn recalled that in nazi propaganda thruout the war, "Goebbels sought constantly to divide the allies by creating dissension, suspicion, and probably the same type of people who draw disparaging comparisons between American and British conduct do the same thing in other zones."

Yanks Are Easy Going

The charge that Americans are "dictatorial" is frankly incomprehensible here, as the Yanks in Germany are just as easy going as back home. But it is pointed out that perhaps the Germans misunderstand American kidding and joking for stern reality and get the wrong impression.

Accusations of injustice also baffled officials here, altho Milburn admitted that "the British have had a great deal more experience administering foreign territories than the United States ever had, so it could be that they are more efficient in handling aliens than we."

"We take coffee grounds from our own messes, rebrew them and serve the coffee to all the German civilians we employ," said Milburn. "Maybe it is not so good as the first brew, but it's a good deal better than ersatz acorn coffee."

Find Favor with Women

Concerning Yank philandering with German wives and single women officials had little to say. "I guess it is true that Americans are more romantic than most other people," Milburn said. "They squired plenty of girls in England, France, Belgium, Holland, Italy, and now Germany.

"But our troops, with plenty of cigarets, candy, chocolate, money, and numerous packages from home are able to tempt girls more than other people.

"We find that GIs find favor with girls, their little brothers and sisters, their parents and whole family, but naturally I suppose there are certain rejected local suitors and cast off husbands who feel pangs of jealousy."

Col. W. E. Heimlich of the Berlin G-2 section stated that he had no evidence of German dissatisfaction with American administration of its Berlin area.

"Everybody in the city seems to want to move over and reside in the American sector," he said. "Our records show mighty few cases of people voluntarily moving out to other sectors."

EARNS NICKNAME

The 4th armored was probably the only American division which scorned taking a nickname or slogan during World War II. It was given the name "Breakthru" division by the rest of the army when it rescued the 101st air borne division at Bastogne.

HOUSE OF LORDS O.K.'S LOAN AND BRETTON WOODS

Nearly 600 Absent as Vote Is Taken

BY E. R. NODERER
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, Dec. 18—Conservative peers made a lot of noise criticizing the United States in a debate on the outcome of the Washington, D. C., talks, but few of them had the courage tonight to vote for rejection of the American offer of a $4,400,000,000 loan on easy terms.

Climaxing the two day house of lords discussion, the peers approved the loan by 90 to 8, then without further argument or vote rushed the bill providing for British ratification of the Bretton Woods proposals thru all stages in 60 seconds. The bill now awaits only the king's approval, which will be given Thursday.

Most of Peers Absent

Heading the peers who voted against the loan terms was Publisher Beaverbrook of the Daily Express, Britain's biggest newspaper. Those voting in favor of the loan included about 40 Liberals, 30 Independents and Conservatives, and 20 Laborites. About 100 other peers were present, but obeyed a dictate of Conservative party leaders and abstained from voting.

A total of 787 peers, of whom more than 600 are Conservatives, are eligible to sit in the house of lords. Despite the fact that only one-fourth the membership was in attendance when one of the most important issues parliament has had to face since September, 1939, came up for decision, political observers reported the house more crowded and excitement greater than at any time in years.

Regrets "Not Free of Interest"

Conservative Party Leader Cranborne in ordering his followers to refrain from voting, warned that if the Laborite government suffered a defeat, it would result in a clash between lords and the house of commons, which previously had indicated it might precipitate abolition of the upper house.

Economist John Maynard Keynes, Britain's chief negotiator with Washington, told the peers that as long as he lived he would never cease to regret the loan was not free of interest. He gave as his opinion also that the loan was too small.

Beaverbrook contended that acceptance of the loan terms meant that the empire was being "needlessly, wantonly, and wickedly thrown away." He told the house Britain should look to the empire for solution of her ills.

"I make no complaint about the Americans advocating the gold standard as a condition of the loan," Beaverbrook said. "Nor do I deny their altruistic motives in the presentation of Bretton Woods. But they do not just happen to suit the economy of Great Britain."

Over 3½ Million Lost

NUERNBERG, Germany, Dec. 18 (AP)—The German army high command admitted secretly just before the Ardennes counter-attack, also known as the Battle of the Bulge, that Germany had lost 3,544,284 men killed or missing in action in more than five years of war, a nazi document disclosed today. Sixty-five per cent of the casualties were on the Russian front.

Prepared for Hitler's headquarters, the report, prepared by the intelligence branch of the German army, indicated that Hitler publicly told the truth about the low price in German lives he paid for conquering Poland, but lied thereafter. It is among records assembled at the Nuernberg palace of justice.

The report did not include wounded, but an attached note stated that 729,031 wounded and sick soldiers were in hospitals in Germany at the time.

Soviet officials have said that German casualties in the east, including dead, wounded, captured, and missing, reached 12,000,000. The German report, covering eastern operations up to Nov. 30, 1944, listed 1,410,728 dead and 907,050 missing, a total of 2,317,778.

Military men say the wounded usually number four times as many as the dead. Applied to the German report, this formula would add more than 5,500,000 to the dead and missing figure and establish a grand total of about 8,000,000 in the east.

ALLIES SAY 'NO' ON EXTRA YULE RATION IN BERLIN

BY HENRY WALES
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

BERLIN, Germany, Dec. 18—The four occupying powers reaffirmed today the decision to exile Santa Claus from Germany this year, solemnly agreeing to issue no special Christmas food, fuel, or other rations to the Berlin population.

However, they ironically extended the Berlin curfew from 11 p. m. to 2 a. m. on Christmas and New Year's days to enable the wretched civilian "revelers" to "celebrate the holidays," altho where and how the roisterers will carouse in the empty city of staring ruins were not explained.

At the same time it was announced that 680,000 persons, 22 per cent of Berlin's inhabitants, are on charity, subsisting on one free bowl of soup daily. Asked about the caloric value of the handout, an American spokesman shook his head and said, "We don't dare even estimate it."

More Dry Beds in Hospitals

Further efforts by German municipal authorities to prepare to cope with winter casualties were approved by the four powers in a decision permitting the maintenance of 40,000 hospital beds, of which 30,000 are "waterproof," meaning a sufficient state of repair to keep rain and snow off the cots. An additional 10,000 beds will be provided as fast as roofs of hospital buildings can be repaired.

The powers agreed to permit German prison guards to carry carbines and five shells apiece to handle jail breaks, and indorsed civil funds to repair Protestant churches for services.

Reflecting the docility of the Germans and the absence of crimes against allied garrisons, the powers contemplate eliminating the curfew in January.

Nazi Purge Modified

Subtly and almost secretly, Gen. Eisenhower's order No. 8, which was issued after Gen. Patton's wisecrack about American election methods and which purged thousands of former Nazi party members out of any jobs except manual labor, is being circumvented in the United States zone of occupation.

With no publicity that might arouse Americans back home, Ike's order is being adapted to fit the circumstances and its harsh application is being modified.

The machinery used is the German review boards, which examine petitions from former Nazi party card holders for revision of their status and for permission to do something more than wield a pick and shovel.

"We place the responsibility of deciding whether a Nazi party member was a run of the mill weakling who joined for material reasons or whether he was a dangerous and ruthless Nazi," said a military government informant. "We found most of the officials and people as bitter against former petty nazi tyrants as we are against the big shots on trial in Nuernberg.

"We exercise control over the review boards' findings and if any board attempted to whitewash a notorious Nazi we would prevent it and investigate the board. Thus far none of their recommendations has been found unacceptable to us."

RUSSIANS WANT 3 BIG NATIONS TO CONTROL PEACE

No 'New Rails' Desired, Says Red Paper

MOSCOW, Dec. 18 (AP)—As foreign minister of the United States, Britain, and Russia met for their third formal session today, the Moscow newspaper New Times indicated Russia would favor continued meetings of the three powers in the interests of world collaboration.

Referring to recent proposals that veto rights of the five major nations on the united nations security council be abolished, the New Times called this an "attempt to balk on firm collaboration of peace-loving great powers," and an attempt to "transfer international policy to new rails" which "cannot lead peoples to a way of reliable peace."

The New Times said the tendency toward a shift of responsibility from the great powers to the united nations as a whole had gone so far in some circles that some organs of the foreign press were seriously discussing whether "Big Three" meetings were needed or not.

Atomic Bomb Issue Cited

Conceding that the atomic bomb had introduced something new into international relations, the New Times asked: "But is firm collaboration of the great powers in the interests of international peace less necessary under the new conditions? Isn't it rather the reverse?"

Sticking to their conference schedule, United States Secretary of State Byrnes and British Foreign Secretary Bevin resumed their talks with Soviet Foreign Commissar Molotov at 4 p. m. in the white and gold conference room of Speridonifka palace.

The foreign ministers were said by informed quarters at the conclusion of the session tonight to be well along on their discussions of the main issues which brought them together. Persons present in the conference room emphasized again that the cordial atmosphere which prevailed was indicative that all was going well. The session, lasting three hours and 15 minutes, was the longest since the talks began.

Stalin Returns to Kremlin

Russians learned that Generalissimo Stalin was back at the Kremlin today after a 68 day vacation on the Black sea. Byrnes and Bevin, both concerned with rumors abroad, were assured by high soviet officials that Stalin is in good health, and were expected to call and pay their respects.

The British embassy said there was some possibility that three aircraft carrying members of Bevin's party would arrive soon in Moscow from Berlin. The planes were grounded by bad weather.

Award Campaign Ribbons to 314 War Reporters

FRANKFURT, Germany, Dec. 18 (AP)—European, African, and middle eastern campaign ribbons were awarded today to 314 civilian war ccrrespondents "for outstanding and conspicuous service with the armed forces under difficult and hazardous combat conditions." Eight awards were made posthumously to Bede Irvin, Associated Press photographer; Harold Denny, New York Times; Jack Frankish, United Press; Harold W. Kulick, Popular Science; David Lardner, New Yorker; Gaston Madru, Newsreel Pool; Ernie Pyle, United Features, and Thomas S. Treanor, Los Angeles Times.

Prosecutors Meet

Lyle K. Wheeler, Havana (left), and Illinois Supreme Court Justice William J. Fulton, at luncheon in Morrison hotel.

Atty. Gen. George F. Barrett told members of the Illinois State's Attorneys' association yesterday they must develop a program for modernizing statutes governing the sale, use, and possession of firearms as the first step to curb increasing crime. He addressed the association at the opening of its three day annual convention in the Morrison hotel.

"Once armed, an individual is potentially a major and vicious criminal," the attorney general said. Black market criminals are seeking other profitable fields, Barrett explained.

State's Atty. Tuohy of Cook county welcomed the convention. He urged sound preparation of cases against criminals and rapid prosecution.

BRITISH BATTLE HAND TO HAND; 80 INDONESIANS DIE

BATAVIA, Java, Dec. 18 (AP)—Hand-to-hand fighting between British Indian troops and 300 Indonesians, in which at least 80 of the native force were killed, was reported by the unit newspaper of the 23d Indian division.

The battle took place yesterday near Buitenzorg, about 30 miles south of Batavia, the newspaper said. Indian dead were put at three, with one British officer and 28 Indian soldiers wounded.

British reconnaisance reports said Indonesian forces had occupied Semarang, recently evacuated by British forces.

British chartered, American manned victory ships were reported evacuating 3,600 refugees from the Semarang area in north central Java. Dutch officials said 1,800 were brought to Batavia and that the others would be shipped to Siam.

HOUSE GROUP FAVORS ACTION TO HELP JEWS

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18 (AP)—The house foreign affairs committee today added its approval to senate passed legislation calling on the government to "use its good offices" with Great Britain to permit free entry of Jews into Palestine.

Chairman Bloom [D., N. Y.] told newsmen the committee, at a closed session, adopted unanimously a resolution identical to one approved overwhelmingly yesterday by the senate. The action clears the way for possible house action on the measure before the holidays.

The resolution has no effect other than to reflect congressional sentiment.

IRANIAN PREMIER PROMISES FIRM ACTION IN REVOLT

TEHRAN, Iran, Dec. 18 (AP)—Prime Minister Ibrahim Hakimi told the Iranian parliament today he would take "strong measures" against insurgents who have set up a government in Azerbaijan province, and would not permit them "to bring this country to ruin thru terror, murder, and rebellion."

He said he would appeal again to the United States, the soviet union, and Britain to evacuate their occupation troops from Iran as soon as possible, and added, "I still intend to go to Moscow."

His unscheduled speech before parliament came shortly after the government, in a statement addressed to foreign embassies, charged that "armed adventurers in Azerbaijan have taken advantage of the presence of foreign forces and engaged, under a treacherous title of democracy, in an armed uprising against the monarch and democratic government of Iran."

Accuse Nonresidents

The statement said the government in Azerbaijan was not made up of inhabitants of the province. It said the founder of the insurgents' Democratic party was "a member of the Communist party at Baku [Russia] named Idalat."

The government presented a list of what it called specific acts of violence, and claimed "people of doubtful character" were "terrorizing and terrifying" the people of the province and "imprisoning and tormenting government officials."

An observer fresh from a trip thru Azerbaijan said that the Democratic party there "openly announced" it was supported by the soviet union.

Dispute Soviet Claim

The government's statement disputed the claim in a soviet memorandum addressed to the United States government that "events which have recently taken place in Iran do not constitute any armed uprising nor even any action against the imperial Iranian government."

The soviet claim, the government said, "is by no means consistent with the facts."

[In London the Iranian delegate to the united nations preparatory commission, Nasrullah Entezzah, said his government was considering a protest to the united nations general assembly in January over what he termed soviet intervention in Azerbaijan province.]

Turkey Slashes Defense Budget for Next Year

ANKARA, Turkey, Dec. 18 [Reuters]—Nurulllah Esat Sumer, Turkish finance minister, today announced a reduction in the Turkish defense budget for next year in the national assembly. "The war which forced us to be ready for any eventuality is over, but delicate questions which concern Turkey and the world force us to be constantly vigilant," he said.

FOOD POOR FRANCE TO SEND CHRISTMAS TURKEYS TO BRITAIN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, Dec. 18—In the midst of a food shortage and with Supply Minister Pierre Tanguy-Prigent calling on "our allies" for aid, it was disclosed today that the French will have turkeys for export to the British Christmas market.

The turkeys will be sent to England at the wholesale price of 50 francs or $1 a pound.

Explaining why France can offer England turkeys at a time when this country is seeking UNRRA help a French government official was quoted in today's Paris press as follows:

"It is a question of sterling. That is why we send Britain things we re short of ourselves. Turkeys are not essential food and as they are not eaten in France as a traditional Christmas dish we can send them ver to England. With the sterling quivalent we can buy tea or whatver we want from England."

It was also announced that the American relief committee for France, an agency of the National War Fund, had bought 72 tons of surplus candy from United States army stores for distribution to French children.

YANK TESTIFIES GUARDS LIVED IN FEAR OF PRISON

LONDON, Dec. 18 (AP)—Staff Sgt. Ashur H. Baizer of New York City testified today that military guards at the Litchfield, England, replacement depot lived in constant fear of being imprisoned themselves if they were not "tough enough" with prisoners.

Baizer was called in the court martial of Sgt. Judson H. Smith, first of 12 Litchfield guards to be tried on charges of brutal treatment of prisoners. Baizer said he heard an officer tell the guardhouse staff that "if they weren't tough enough they might find themselves behind bars."

Other witnesses added to the accounts of clubbings and punishments that have been described by a series of enlisted men confined at Litchfield before returning to combat during the last year of the war.

TESTIFY NAZIS HURLED BABIES AGAINST WALLS

MOSCOW, Dec. 18 (AP)—Infants snatched from their mothers were hurled against stone walls and killed, and Germans twice weekly during one period of the occupation shot large groups of men, women and children, witnesses testified today at the Smolensk war crimes trial of 10 Germans.

One woman witness said that after the mass shootings in Smolensk, Thursdays and Saturdays, a "gas wagon" regularly hauled loads of corpses to a big ditch and dumped the bodies there. She said the Germans tore babies from their mothers and hurled the infants into the wagon.

ALLIES NEARING END OF SCHOOL PURGE IN ITALY

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

ROME, Dec. 8 [By Airmail]—More than 4,000,000 Italian children are attending elementary and secondary schools and the purge of fascists from the educational system has been almost completed, Lt. Col. Carleton W. Washburne reported. Washburne, head of the education subgroup of the allied commission, formerly was superintendent of schools at Winnetka, Ill., where his methods of progressive instruction were sharply debated.

"Most Italian children left school at the age of 11," Washburne said. "They were supposed to remain until they were at least 14, but that regulation was not enforced. Parents withdrawing their children before the age of 14 were fined two lire. That's 2 cents now; it was about 10 cents under the fascist regime, and it didn't bother anybody.

School Space Limited

"The top school enrollment before 1939 was 5,000,000 and, of course, it dropped to only a fraction of that during the war and the German occupation. We still can't compel parents to send their children to classes, but more are coming voluntarily all the time. We can't accommodate 5,000,000 at this time; there isn't enough primary and secondary school space and an enrollment of that size would break the present governmental budget for education."

In the provinces of Italy from Naples north, 5.1 per cent of the school staffs have been dismissed for fascist adherence, 4,672 out of 91,607.

Fascism Stronger at Top

The higher the rank the stronger the fascist element, Washburne found. Thus, at the top of the scale, 39 of 43 provincial school superintendents had to be ousted, while at the bottom, among classroom teachers, only 3,870 out of 88,404 were removed.

Four hundred new varieties of textbooks, containing none of the fascist propaganda with which Mussolini blanketed the school system, are now in use, and the ministry of education is coöperating with the allied commission in a program of teacher education.

"We are trying to build up the democratic attitude in classrooms," Washburne said. "But I haven't introduced any of the progressive education practices I employed in Winnetka. They would be unsuitable here."

UNION REJECTS 12.4 PER CENT FORD PAY BOOST

Firm's New Security Plan Would Reduce Fines

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 18 (AP)—The CIO United Automobile workers today rejected a 12.4 per cent wage rate increase offer by the Ford Motor company.

The rejection came less than an hour after the Ford company announced the offer while representatives of management and union were meeting on the UAW-CIO demand for a 30 per cent wage rate increase.

The UAW-CIO recently turned down a 10 per cent wage rate increase offer by General Motors corporation, whose 175,000 production workers have been on strike nearly a month over the union's 30 per cent increase demand.

15 Cents an Hour

Ford estimated its increase offer at 15 cents an hour to all production workers. The G. M. offer was estimated by the management to amount to 13½ cents an hour.

"The Ford proposal is completely unacceptable to the union," said Richard T. Leonard, UAW-CIO Ford director, as he come out of the negotiating conference. He did not amplify his statement but indicated a detailed explanation would be made later. It was announced the conferences between union and company would be resumed Thursday.

The Ford offer was coupled with a condition that it become effective for a period of two years at the beginning of the calendar month during which production of all Ford vehicles, cars, and trucks reached or exceeded 80,000 units monthly. The Ford normal peace time output is in excess of 120,000 units a month.

New Security Plan

The proposal also stipulated elimination of unauthorized work stoppages, an agreement regarding management prerogatives, and a reduction in the number of union committeemen. It also included a new "company security" plan, providing penalties against individual workers and the union for unauthorized work stoppages.

The Ford management, which previously had stated it stood to lose "about 35 million dollars during 1946 even without a wage increase," said today its newest proposal meant an additional outlay of 33 million dollars annually.

"This represents a 12.4 per cent increase in our present average wage and approximately 21 per cent more than the present average of our major competitors," said the Ford letter to the union.

The company is willing to risk the additional 33 million dollars, the management said, in an effort to win the confidence and coöperation of its employes; stay in production and keep men employed; help break the log jam of post-war mass production, and "do our share in halting inflation."

A company spokesman said he assumed the $68,000,000 loss envisaged by the company during its 1946 operations would "come out of capital."

"It certainly won't be taken out of profits," he added.

The New Proposal

Under the new proposal individual workers taking part in illegal strikes would be penalized $1.50 a day during their first participation and $2.50 for their second. The union would be liable to the company for an equal amount for each worker involved.

This was a modification of the company's original proposal of a fine of $5 a day, which would have been levied against the union.

In addition, the UAW-CIO would be held liable to the company in the amount of $5,000 for each person not an employe of the company who might be found guilty of "instigating, fomenting, actively supporting or giving leadership to an illegitimate strike."

PICKETS KEEP FLINT WORKERS OUT IN THE COLD

BY THOMAS MORROW
(Chicago Tribune Press Service)

Flint, Mich., Dec. 18—The coldest and most heated labor controversy in Flint waited settlement late today.

While the mercury bounded around the zero mark, more than 600 CIO-UAW pickets assembled at the main gate of the AC Sparkplug plant and halted entrance of several hundred office workers. Most of the office workers gathered across the street and made no attempt to penetrate the picket line.

Those who did were shouldered away from the gates by the pickets who moved thru the ear frosting day in a brisk circle to bar the gate. Both pickets and office workers maintained a remarkable good nature despite the bitter cold and the call of "scab" which greeted the gathering white collar help.

One Threat of Trouble

One threat of trouble rose in the early afternoon when pickets muttered uncomplimentary things about Flint police and milled around a squad car. Hansel Larson, international representative, talked them away before any conflict arose.

No better pleased with Flint police were plant officials when Police Chief James Byars, who yesterday returned from a Florida vacation, ruled after consideration that if the office workers wanted it they could "go around the picket lines."

This was a direct change in policy from Monday when police, directed by Capt. Jess Hawkins, formed a flying wedge to push thru the picket lines and escort office workers into the plant.

There were two schools of thought over the reversal of police form. One was that the 600 pickets looked unappetizing to the 30 patrolmen. The other held that crashing a union picket line might not be popular in a town where the city commissioners usually vote 5 to 4 pro-labor.

Prepare to Go to Court

Al Langlois, AC plant protection chief, held the chief's idea of going around the picket line would not work because the picket line would extend and halt admission. In answer to the chief's contention that picketing was peaceful, Langlois rejoined:

"What's the matter. Did Jake get to you?" [Jacob Waldo is head of the Flint PAC of the CIO.]

Plant officials prepared to go into court and seek an injunction restraining the pickets. They hold that picketing is not peaceful where threats, intimidation, or force is used to bar the gate to workers.

The main question, which struck General Motors plants and made idle almost 40,000 Flint persons—10,000 at the AC plant—is that of a 32 cent pay raise now under discussion in Detroit. Question of admitting office workers to plants was left to locals' discretion.

Officials Deny Charge

In the case of AC, the local agreed, then withdrew the agreement. They held thru William [Alabama Bill] Rogers, vice chairman of the shop committee, and Archie Myers, local president, that plant officials had not negotiated in good faith and had taken supervisory workers into the plant to work on production lines. Plant officials denied the charge.

During the early weeks of the strike General Motors had instructed salaried workers not to risk harm by trying to pass thru picket lines and had mailed checks to their homes. But last week-end the company, after seeking injunctions to restrain pickets from interfering with office workers, advised clerical and supervisory employes to report for work.

The strike is not popular with some union men who would like to go back to work.

U. OF I. TRUSTEES TO HEAR FACTS IN HANNAH CASE

Champaign, Ill., Dec. 18 (AP)—Park Livingston, president of the board of trustees of the University of Illinois, announced today he has called a meeting of the board at Champaign Dec. 27 for "complete discussion" of the recent change of directors of the university's veterans bureau.

The announcement said Prof. Harold W. Hannah, who Sunday charged the board of trustees "coerced" the university president, Dr. A. C. Willard, to replace him as director with Col. Charles R. Frederick, has been invited to appear at the open meeting. Representatives of the campus post of the American Legion, who have demanded Hannah's reinstatement, also have been invited.

In a letter addressed to Livingston today, Hannah said the issue is whether the university shall be "dominated by a political body or strongly and fairly administered by its executive head, the president."

16 MARINES HURT IN EXPLOSION OF MUNITION TRUCK

San Diego, Cal., Dec. 18 (AP)—A navy ammunition truck caught fire and exploded on a highway about 15 miles north of here today with a concussion that rendered almost 1,000 persons homeless in a near-by federal housing project and caused about 20 casualties.

No serious injuries were reported by police. Camp Matthews, near the blast, reported 16 marines were treated for cuts.

The truck driver, John Ayala, of Fallbrook, Cal., noticed his gas tank aflame and leaped out to notify authorities. Police and firemen evacuated residents of adjacent Torrey Pines federal housing project.

SKIPPER TELLS LAST MOMENTS OF BIG CRUISER

Why He Didn't Zigzag: It Was Murky Night

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18 (AP)—Capt. Charles B. McVay testified at his court martial today that he did not order the Indianapolis to maintain a zigzag course the night the heavy cruiser was sunk because he considered visibility conditions made it unnecessary.

Capt. McVay is being tried on charges of negligence and inefficiency in the loss of the warship last July 30 while en route from Guam to Leyte. The navy has attributed the ship's loss to an enemy submarine.

Testimony Is Voluntary

The accused officer took the stand today at his own request.

He said visibility was poor that night and there was no moon, hence he did not order the zigzag course maintained.

Dramatically recounting the story of his actions in the 15 minutes which elapsed between the explosions and the ship's sinking, Capt. McVay said he was asleep in his emergency cabin when the explosions occurred.

His first impression when awakened was that the ship had been struck by a suicide plane. Then, he said, he realized they were out of the area where a suicide attack might occur, and he realized it must have been mines or torpedoes.

Communications Are Down

He went out on deck, he said, and was informed that all communications were out, that the damage control officer had gone below to determine the situation, and that efforts to signal the engine room to stop engines had been fruitless. He said he sent word immediately to the radio shack to get out a distress message.

He said he was unable to see anything from the bridge to indicate the extent of damage, but the ship then was maintaining a fairly even keel.

The damage control officer reported shortly thereafter that his examination indicated the ship was badly damaged and asked the captain if he wanted to order the ship abandoned.

Orders a Recheck

McVay said he replied, "No," that he thought the damage could be controled and ordered the officer to go below again and recheck.

Then, he related, the executive officer reported the damage was so extensive that he considered the ship doomed and recommended that it be abandoned.

McVay said because of his confidence in the executive officer's judgment, he immediately told him to pass word to abandon ship.

A Sudden List

About eight minutes after the explosion, he said, he told the officer of the deck he was going to the radio shack himself to make sure a distress message went out. When he reached the signal bridge, he said, the ship took a sudden list and seemed to hold at about 60 degrees. Then within 30 seconds it went over to 90 degrees, he said, and it sank soon after.

THIS DAY IN HISTORY

Dec. 19—Massacre at Fort Niagara

IN the black, freezing night of Dec. 18-19, 1813, Col Murray's British and Indians, about 1,000 strong, crossed the Niagara river from the Canadian to the American side. The bulk of the force then pressed forward toward Fort Niagara, three miles distant.

Murray's mission was partly one of revenge. Eight days earlier the American general, McClure, forced to withdraw from Fort George, a British post on the Niagara, had burned the pretty Canadian village of Newark. Now, as the British deployed their forces about Fort Niagara in the early hours of Dec. 19, they regarded the garrison within as lawless marauders rather than as enemies in war.

Capt. Leonard, who commanded at Niagara, had left the fort to spend the night with his family in their home three miles away. The main gate of the fort was virtually unguarded. Murray and his forces entered and quickly overpowered the surprised garrison. There might have been no British casualties at all were it not for the dogged resistance of two small pockets of Americans. As it was, six British were killed and five wounded.

British and Indians ravaged the Niagara country, killing, plundering, and destroying. The proportions of American casualties at the fort itself—about 80 killed and only 14 wounded—suggests that some of the defenders who dared to offer resistance were given no chance to lay down their arms peaceably after they saw that the fight was hopeless, but were mercilessly slaughtered.

There was not a complete massacre, however. The British took about 340 unwounded prisoners.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18 (AP)—Master Sgt. Vito Bertoldo of Decatur, Ill., has stopped worrying whether he "did right" when he killed 40 German soldiers in France last January.

Sgt. Vito Bertoldo

The soldier, 28, the son of a former Illinois coal miner, was one of six heroes decorated with the congressional medal of honor today by President Truman in the White House study.

Writes Father of Worry

"Vito was worried about having killed so many men," his wife, Dorothy Marie, told a reporter. "He wrote and asked his father if he'd done the right thing. But it doesn't seem to bother him any more."

"I didn't get mad during combat—my gun got mad," said Bertoldo.

His citation said he "withstood the attack of vastly superior forces for more than 48 hours without rest or relief, time after time escaping death only by the slightest margin."

Bertoldo, a slightly built, bespectacled man, was placed in limited service because of faulty eyesight when he was inducted three years ago.

Decatur to Honor Hero

Decatur plans a parade and celebration for him Thursday when he returns home.

Capt. Dunlap, 25, said he was "a helluva lot more nervous" as a bridegroom last Friday than as a congressional medal of honor recipient. His bride, the former Mary Louise Frantz of Monmouth, Ill., watched the ceremonies today.

Dunlap's citation said that during the capture of Iwo Island last February he led his troops in a determined advance, "working without respite for two days and two nights under constant enemy fire, and skilfully directed a smashing bombardment against almost impregnable Japanese positions, despite numerous obstacles and heavy marine casualties."

Wears Steel Brace on Leg

He was supposed to have been decorated during Nimitz day ceremonies here Oct. 3, but he couldn't make it. He was still locked up in the heavy cast he wore 10 months.

The couple said they'd been "going together" since they met at a Monmouth college dance in 1941.

They became engaged last April at the Great Lakes Naval hospital.

The honeymooners plan to return to Galesburg to spend Christmas with his father, W. G. Dunlap. Afterward they'll go to Great Lakes, where the captain is to undergo further operations on his hip and leg.

BIG DYNAMITE SCARE TOUCHES OFF HOUSE BLAST AT BUROCRATS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18—Rep. Weichel [Rep., O.] told the house today he doesn't believe the contention of government burocrats that a small community near the Plum Brook ordnance works on the outskirts of Sandusky, O., must be abolished as a safety hazard.

Weichel said that after the arsenal closed down several months ago, 27 mansion-like homes built by the army near the plant for the use of army staff officers and other personnel were declared surplus property altho he found them still occupied on a visit there a week ago.

"I asked the Reconstruction Finance corporation that returning war veterans and reconversion workers, faced with the housing shortage, be permitted to purchase these surplus houses which cost nearly $200,000," Weichel told the house. "I was informed that these houses and buildings have become saturated with dynamite dust and must be destroyed.

"This 'dynamite dust' excuse looks to me like another preparation for the sale of surplus property at a great loss to the government."

OLD SCHOOL TIE REVERSED; COP DEFEATS BULLY

While Patrolman James Derrig was walking his beat at State and Van Buren sts. yesterday, a passerby told him that a man was cashing a bad check in a near-by barber shop.

Derrig hurried to the scene and recognized the check passer as William B. Meyer, 33, of 901 Armitage av., a schoolmate who had bullied him on many occasions. Meyer did not recognize the policeman.

Derrig demanded to see the bogus check. After fisticuffs, he got it, with another bad one and a check book. A near-by cab driver interposed to say that Meyer owed him an $18 cab bill. A near-by bartender claimed $3.60. Meyer, who has a long Bridewell record, fought in vain to escape a patrol wagon ride. He was held pending appearance of other victims. Then Derrig identified himself. That didn't make his prisoner any happier.

GIVES AUTOIST A PUSH—RIGHT INTO TROUBLE

Ashland, O., Dec. 18 (AP) — When Irvin Routsong's automobile refused to start this morning an unidentified motorist pulled up back of him and started pushing the stalled car.

The pushing continued to the Erie railroad, where the "good samaritan" turned down a side street. Routsong's car, with the engine still dead, stopped on the railroad track.

Routsong had time to jump free before the train hit. The automobile was demolished.

PULLMAN GOES TO RAILROADS, COURT DECIDES

Group of 43 Bidders to Pay About 75 Million

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 18 (AP)—A bidding group of 43 American railroads won federal court approval today for purchase of the Pullman sleeping car business at a price of about 75 million dollars.

A special three-judge expediting court overruled three other prospective purchasers, holding the railroads "are the natural and obvious people to do sleeping car business." It sharply warned the carriers, however, that they must not establish a monopoly.

Follows Months of Hearings

Pullman, Inc., parent of the Pullman company, previously had accepted the railroad offer which was made when it elected to dispose of its operating business in compliance with an anti-trust decision. It will retain the Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing company.

Final action followed months of hearings during which the carriers and other bidders—Otis & Co., Cleveland banking firm; Glore, Forgan & Co., Chicago banking firm, and Standard Steel Spring company, Coraopolis, Pa.—each argued they could best serve the traveling public.

Representatives of the bidders were not present when today's decision was released by the clerk of United States District court. However, James P. Masterson, Philadelphia attorney associated with counsel supporting the Otis bid, said an appeal would be taken to the Supreme court.

Bars Linking Directorates

The government, thru Holmes Baldridge, special assistant attorney general, advocated approval of the Otis bid on grounds it would create the only possible competitive situation.

In directing Pullman, Inc., to submit a suggested form of order for sale of the sleeping car business, the court stipulated it must specify there shall be no interlocking directorates between Pullman-Standard, Pullman, Inc., and the railroads; and that purchases of new sleeping cars by Pullman company and the railroads must be made under competitive bidding.

"We do not want the practices established under the monopolistic regime to carry over into the operation in the hands of the new owners," said Judge Herbert F. Goodrich's opinion, in which Judges Albert B. Maris and John Biggs Jr., concurred.

Denies U. S. Contention

The court denied a government contention that it should detefmine the best way to conduct sleeping car business for the benefit of the country at large.

"We think it is the court's task to strike at monopolistic practices when it finds them to exist, and then leave it to competitive business, freed from monopoly, to take advantage of the public freedom to profit for itself and incidentally benefit the public," the court said.

The children who perished in the fire were Marianne, 23; Alice, 22; Theresa, 17, and Michael, 14. They burned to death.

In another fire in the subzero cold Mrs. Nettie Burton, 63, of East Chicago, Ind., lost her life by suffocation in a blaze which destroyed the Calumet building at Indianapolis blvd. and Chicago av., East Chicago, with a loss estimated at $500,000.

Flames which started in the basement drove occupants from six flats in a brick warehouse and apartment building at 4411 Montrose av. and caused $8,500 damage. Fire of undetermined origin caused damage estimated at $5,000 last night to a five-story brick building at 515-523 N. Halsted st. which houses several industrial firms.

Fire of undetermined origin in the Joseph H. Kirk Barrel company, 725 W. 31st st., last night caused damage estimated by Fire Marshal Larry Owens of the 4th division at $10,000.

SPIES UNMASKED BY U. S. CENSORS IN WAR OF WITS

BY WILLIAM STRAND

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18—Hitherto secret accounts of behind-the-scenes struggles during the war between allied censors and enemy agents thruout the world were revealed today by Byron Price, former director of the office of censorship.

Price asserted in his final report that war time censorship played its most dramatic and effective role in its attacks upon axis secret communications and its vigilance in detecting enemy espionage.

It was a war of wits with human lives at stake, according to his description, fought by quiet men in laboratories while the world's attention was riveted upon the more stirring evnts on the battlefields.

A Letter Leads to Death

There was, for example, the case of Heinz August Luning, who was arrested Sept. 5, 1942, in Havana, Cuba. He died before a firing squad two months later after conviction as a Nazi spy because censors in Bermuda a year before hadn't liked the look of a business letter he had written to a firm in Portugal.

The censors were going thru a routine pile of mail, selecting samples at random for laboratory testing when Luning's letter was uncovered.

It appeared innocuous, the report said, but chemical reagents indicated the presence of invisible ink and the entire letter was developed.

That was the beginning. Within a few days another letter in similar handwriting was picked out. Tests brought out a secret message headed "No. 4."

Message No. 86 Arrives

Three weeks later there was another, then another, each purporting to be written by a different person and sent to a different firm, but each bearing a message in invisible ink. Message "No. 36" arrived in Bermuda in May, 1942, and shortly thereafter other messages were found in mail bags in New York addressed to a new intermediary in Spain.

Luning, whose identity was known to Cuban authorities, was becoming uneasy. On Aug. 22, 1942, he wrote in his open letter that he "agreed to the proposal to suspend commercial operations immediately." On the back in secret ink there was written merely "letter No. 18."

He was arrested and found to be a graduate of a German spy school in Hamburg who had been operating in Havana since September, 1941.

Addresses Unmask Others

The addresses used by Luning led to the solution of other espionage cases. Early in February, 1942, a letter mailed to one of the addressees in Spain was turned over by censorship for a routine examination and found to bear a secret message in German consisting of a report on shipping in United States ports. It was signed "Fred Lewis."

[Associated Press Wirephotos]

Other letters with different signatures but in the same handwriting were intercepted subsequently and in April "Lewis" wrote his last message: "I am losing the house at the end of April as, in accordance with your wishes, all occupants have been given notice and I am without a job since my illness—Heil Hitler."

He was arrested in June and found to be Ernest Frederick Lehmitz, proprietor of a Staten Island rooming house and a zealous air raid warden in his rooming house. He was partial to sailors as tenants and worked in a water front restaurant frequented by naval men.

Two Get Prison Terms

With him, the federal bureau of investigation arrested a confederate, Erwin Harry De Spretter, a mechanical engineer and former lieutenant in the German army. Both pleaded guilty in federal court and were sentenced to 30 years' imprisonment.

Another who was trapped and seized under similar circumstances was Count Wilhelm Albrecht von Pressentin Gennant von Rautter, a Nazi of colorful history. He was sentenced to 30 years in prison.

Another was Malvena Blucher Dickinson, proprietor of a doll shop on Madison av., New York City. She attempted to correspond with enemy agents in Buenos Aires, giving the location of allied shipping on the west coast which she visited frequently on business.

Plays Watchdog Role

In these and numerous other cases, Price said the office of censorship did no investigative or police work. Its task was to be on the constant lookout for espionage messages and to turn them over to other government branches for action.

He said war time censorship met its greatest challenge in keeping vital information from the enemy during the weeks preceding the Normandy invasion.

The report said production of the atomic bomb was the best kept secret of the war and hailed the coöperation of newspapers and radio in their voluntary adherence to the censorship code thru which information described as being of incalculable value to the enemy was withheld thruout the war.

Actress Divorced

[Associated Press Wirephoto]

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 18 (AP)—Ella Raines, screen actress, won a divorce today from Kenneth W. Trout, recently an air corps major and now an air line pilot. Trout was "moody and sulky" during their three year marriage, wrote infrequently when absent on duty, and criticized her and her friends, she testified. His conduct made her ill, she added. "Several times he slapped me across the face and I didn't think I was provoking him," the actress asserted.

HOMMA PLEADS INNOCENT; TRIAL SET FOR JAN. 3

MANILA, P. I., Dec. 19 [Wednesday] (AP)—Lt. Gen. Masaharu Homma pleaded "innocent today to responsibility for the Bataan death march and other major Japanese atrocities in the Philippines.

Speaking clearly in English, the one time conqueror of the Philippines agreed to dispense with translation as he was arraigned before a United States military commission. He was ordered to appear for trial Jan. 3.

He is accused of responsibility for the death march, in which 17,200 American and Filipino prisoners died, and with numerous other brutalities, including the atrocious deaths of 4,831 Americans and 45,000 Filipinos between April and August, 1942, in the infamous O'Donnell and Cabanatuan prison camps.

Homma is the second former commander of Japanese forces in the Philippines to be tried here as a war criminal.

REVENUE BUREAU REPORTS $3,640 JOBS GO BEGGING

Jobs paying up to $3,640 a year for a 40 hour week are going begging and the treasury department is losing more than a billion dollars in unreported tax liabilities because men cannot be found to take jobs as internal revenue agents, the United States civil service commission reported yesterday.

Ernest C. Wright, agent in charge of the Chicago office, said shortage of help had caused the audit of books and returns to lag as much as three years and so far had prevented discovery of many tax dodgers, particularly those who profited from black-market dealings. He said he needed an additional 160 revenue agents to bring his staff up to strength.

Experience or training in bookkeeping and accounting are required of all applicants, but they will be trained further after they are employed at salaries ranging from $2,980 to $3,640 a year.

[ADVERTISMENT]

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

LEARN LANGE HELD $20,000 OF FLORIDA WOMAN

Police Disclose Letter Offering Job to Him

A letter found yesterday in the perfumed Wilson avenue apartment of Lawrence A. Lange by police investigating his slaying revealed that Mrs. Margaret K. Heiss of West Palm Beach, Fla., who for years had "regarded him as a son," urged him to leave the employ of Charles H. Morse "before they break your spirit, your health, and your good will."

Mrs. Heiss, who served 30 years ago as governess to the children of Morse's sister, was revealed by police as the owner of most of the $34,200 fortune found by detectives investigating Lange's affairs.

Letter Contains Job Offer

The letter, written Oct. 9 and received by Lange before his visit to Mrs. Heiss in November, contained the offer of a position from Mrs. Jeannette Morse Genius McKean.

"If you want to change positions, you must do it before Christmas," Mrs. Heiss wrote. "Otherwise they will pin you down for another year, which may break your spirit, your health, and your good will. I strongly advise you to leave."

Mrs. McKean, located by police in New Orleans, La., said that she had offered Lange an important post with the Winter Park [Fla.] Land association, part of her inheritance.

Lange Had Accepted New Post

Police Capt. Thomas Kelly said a letter was found in Lange's apartment, dated Nov. 25, from Harry W. Stone, vice president of the Winter Park concern, offering him a position at $300 a month; also a copy of a letter from Lange accepting the position.

Kelly said a Chicago business woman who had aided Lange in some financial transactions would report at the Albany Park station at 4 p. m. today to answer questions relating to her business activities with the man later slain.

Woman's Securities Found

Of two envelopes discovered in the private safe of Morse, retired president of Fairbanks, Morse & Co., whose private secretary Lange had been for several years, one contained $10,000 in securities. The second, containing $20,000 in securities, had a penciled notation that the securities belonged to Mrs. Heiss and, in the event of Lange's death, should be forwarded to her. A bank book in Lange's name showed deposits of $4,200. Police are trying to learn whether the $10,000 in securities and the bank account also belonged to Mrs. Heiss.

TAVERN GABBLE LANDS 2 IN NET OF WAVE'S DEATH

Because of remarks that they made in different taverns, two men were seized by police yesterday for questioning about the murder of Miss Frances Brown, 33, former WAVE found slain Dec. 10 in her apartment at 3941 Pine Grove av.

Alois Mueller, 41, of 900 Montrose av., was taken into custody at Wilson av. and Broadway and Arthur Birkland, 24, of 4945 Melrose st., a former soldier, was seized in a tavern near Belmont av. and Pulaski rd. They were accused of talking obscenely.

Samples of their handwriting were taken for comparison with writing on the wall in Miss Brown's apartment. Five women associates of Miss Brown have taken lie detector tests that corroborated their statements that they knew nothing of the murder, said Capt. Frank Reynolds of Albany Park station.

LOSES $250 RING IN HOME

Mrs. Mary Callahan, 5463 Cornell av., told police yesterday she lost a $350 diamond ring near her home.

SMOKING MATE FIRES HER BED, WIFE DIVORCED

Mrs. June Crockett, 23, of 2659 Mildred st., told Judge Edwin A. Robson in Superior court yesterday that she was willing to keep the home fires burning, but with limitations. Questioned by Harry X. Cole, her attorney, Mrs. Crockett said that her husband, William, 29, had a habit of smoking in bed; this frequently resulted in setting the bedclothes afire. She had to stay awake all night to put the fires out, she said; furthermore, sleeplessness interfered with her job and affected her health. Judge Robson granted her a divorce.

N. U. WILL START ACADEMIC STUDY OF AERONAUTICS

An institute of aeronautics will be established on the Chicago campus of Northwestern university, it was announced yesterday by Franklyn B. Snyder, president.

The institute will not give instruction in flying or include vocational subjects in its curriculum. Instruction will be at the graduate level, for students interested in specialized aspects of aeronautics, and will draw upon all the resources of the university for a coördinated program of research in fundamental problems of the aviation industry. Ultimately, President Snyder said, the institute will require an endowment of 10 million dollars.

Fred D. Fagg Jr., vice president and dean of faculties of Northwestern, has been appointed director of the institute. He was a pilot during World War I. Paul E. Klopsteg, for the last four years chairman of the governing board of the American Institute of Physics, has been appointed associate director to Fagg. Klopsteg is widely known for his work in the field of scientific instruments.

ROBBER NAMES ANOTHER PAL AT POLICE KILLING

Involves Ex-Garageman Who Sold Out, Fled

A third would-be robber was placed on the scene of the murders of Detectives Charles A. Brady and George H. Hellstern last Sept. 2 at Clark st. and Lunt av. in testimony given yesterday at the inquest into their deaths.

The policemen were slain by Cecil [Red] Smith, an ex-convict, who later was executed and buried in a cornfield by fellow members of a robbery gang.

Lawrence Mazzanars, 34, of 3402 Lyndale st., who was with Smith the night the policemen were killed but did not take part in the shooting, testified at the inquest that a Frank Nitti also was at the scene.

Unrelated to Capone Leader

Nitti, who is not related to the late Frank Nitti, Capone gang leader, who committed suicide March 19, 1943, formerly operated a garage at 3515 Grand av., Mazzanars said. Nitti sold his business after the police shooting and left the city, police said.

On the night the policemen were shot, Mazzanars and Smith drove together to Clark st. and Lunt av., and Nitti drove there in his own car, the witness said. The automobiles were parked together in Lunt av., Mazzanars said.

The men had planned to rob a drug store at the intersection, but Mazzanars and Nitti started to leave when they saw the men they believed were policemen.

The coroner's jury returned a verdict that the detectives had been murdered by Smith. Coroner Brodie lauded the efforts of the slain policemen to seize the robbers and the subsequent work of detectives which led to the arrest of the gang.

Smith, suspected of being an informer, was shot and killed Nov. 29 by Renoro Lolli in Mazzanars' car. Lolli and Mazzanars testified. The jury recommended both be held.

ASKS JURY FREE SLAYER FOR SAKE OF CHILDREN

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 18 (AP)—Mrs. Annie Irene Mansfeldt's attorney pleaded with a jury today to acquit her of murder for the sake of her three children and because "there is reasonable doubt of her guilt."

Mrs. Mansfeldt, 45, is charged with the gun slaying of Mrs. Vada Martin, 36, a nurse whom she suspected of an affair with her husband, Dr. John H. Mansfeldt. The physician committed suicide after the shooting.

Defense Attorney Vincent Hallinan concluded a 6 hour and 47 minute argument for acquittal with the declaration that the "specter of hereditary insanity" hangs over the Mansfeldt children, John 14; Irene, 15, and Terry, 12. Mrs. Mansfeldt has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity.

JAP INVENTION USED BY U. S. IN WINNING OF WAR

was a crucial weapon in winning the war, will prove a great boon to navigation in peace time, McDonald explained.

"Every ship's pilot will be able to see, in the end of a radio tube, geographical hazards that, until the present, would have forced him to anchor or stand off shore when blanketed by fog," he said. "The saving in time and money will be tremendous, to say nothing of the greater safety that will be brought."

Always "Ceiling Unlimited"

Passenger planes will be equipped with radar and low ceilings and fog will lose their ability to ground air traffic, he said: "Thru fog and dark and storm radar will always give the pilot 'ceiling and visibility unlimited.'"

Radar may be mounted on locomotives to prevent collision and its basic principles will be utilized in many industrial devices, he continued. New radionic devices that bring a uniform temperature rise thruout an object being heated are speeding the work of molders, and other processes of curing, baking, and drying.

"With radionic roasting of beef," McDonald promises, "you can cook it uniformly so that it will be all rare or all well done."

Dr. Alexander Ellett, who had charge of the proximity fuse development for the national bureau of standards, has been appointed head of the research department for Zenith, McDonald announced.

COURT ACQUITS PRINCIPAL OF SCHOOL PETTING

Story Told by Girl, 13, Is Repudiated by Judge

Judge Leonard C. Reid in Criminal court directed a verdict of not guilty yesterday in the trial of John K. White, 48, principal of Pershing elementary school in Berwyn, on a charge of contributing to the delinquency of a 13 year old girl pupil.

The verdict was directed after White testified in refutation of the testimony of the girl, Carol Lofgren, 3722 Gunderson av., Berwyn, now a freshman in Morton High school, Cicero, and her mother, Selma, that he fondled and kissed the child in the school last spring.

Problem Child, Principal Says

White said the girl had been a problem child since she entered first grade. On one day in which she charged he had pressed promiscuous attention on her he said he had not even been in the building. More than 150 character witnesses, including ministers and teachers, appeared in court to testify to White's good reputation.

The court instructed the jury of six men and six women to find White not guilty on the defense counsel's second motion for a directed verdict.

Would Reject Guilty Verdict

"When I took the position of judge, I took an oath to follow and direct the law justly," Judge Reid said after White testified. "If a verdict of guilty were returned in this case, I just could not let it stand on my oath of office."

Spectators applauded as the verdict was signed in the jury box.

The court made special note of testimony that Mrs. Lofgren did not make a complaint about White until this fall, altho Carol testified she told her mother "everything" May 7, when White sent the girl home from school as a disciplinary measure.

Complaint Long Deferred

The girl, whose long black hair curled to her shoulders, testified that White kissed her 20 times in the school building and said he gave her better grades than she earned in subjects which he taught. Her mother followed her on the stand and said the girl told her about White's alleged attentions last May. Mrs. Lofgren said she made a complaint to the Berwyn school board in October.

White denied he ever had touched or kissed Carol and said he gave her only the grades she merited, which, he commented, "were not very good ones."

Former Woman Bundist Is Denied Citizenship

Mrs. Gertrude Steffens, 36, of 3606 Grace st., was denied American citizenship yesterday by Judge Walter J. La Buy in federal District court. He told her she was "loyal to Germany." Atty. Dewey G. Hutchinson of the immigration service said Mrs. Steffens formerly was a member of the German-American bund and saluted the nazi flag. She came to the United States from Germany in 1935.

3 CHICAGOLAND MAIL SUSPECTS HELD TO JURY

Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 18 (AP)—Three Illinoisans, arrested after the son of a Forest Park, Ill., plant guard telephoned detectives here he had been beaten and kidnaped by the group, were held to the grand jury today when arraigned before V. U. Sigler, United States commissioner, on a charge of mail theft.

They are August Anton Sirmer Jr., 17, Chicago; Robert Leland Chenault, 16, and Florian Lewandowski, 20, both of Cicero.

They were charged with stealing two packages from a mail box near Collins, Ia., Dec. 3 during the trip to Des Moines, which Detective Chief Castelline said was made in the automobile of Richard Noltemeyer, 17, after the latter had been kidnaped in Cicero and forced to accompany the trio and two younger boys. Noltemeyer escaped here and called police.

The two others, Le Roy Fabian, 15, and Robert Mastenbrook, 16, both of Berwyn, Ill., were held as witnesses.

U. S. RAIDS STILL; SUGAR SUPPLY SOURCE HUNTED

E. C. Yellowley, district supervisor of the federal alcohol tax unit, directed an investigation yesterday to learn the source of 100,000 pounds of sugar that he said was used in seven weeks in operating a 500 gallon still seized in a raid at 736 N. Albany av. Agents under Col. Thomas Bailey, chief investigator, also confiscated 6,750 gallons of mash and 12 gallons of alcohol. They arrested Howard Farley, 38, and Mrs. Esther Ranft, 41, a widow, as the operators. The defendants pleaded not guilty before United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker, who released them on bond for arraignment Jan. 2.

SCHENLEY DISTILLERS CORPORATION

NOTE—From time to time, in this paper, there will appear an advertisement which we hope will be of interest to our fellow Americans. This is number 111 of a series.

SCHENLEY DISTILLERS CORP.

Another Milestone

By MARK MERIT

On August 31, 1945, another fiscal year ended for this company—Schenley Distillers Corporation—another milestone in its 12 year story of development. Now, another annual report to our stock holders has been issued for this fiscal year which came to an end almost coincidentally with the end of the fighting phase of the war.

Every man and woman among the 12,000 in the employ of this company, is perhaps pardonably proud of the part the company was privileged to play in the Nation's united effort to achieve early and complete victory.

The company's material contribution to this effort is revealed in the review of this last fiscal year's report.

Scanning the report, we read that between November 1, 1941, when our company voluntarily undertook the production of 190° proof alcohol for war purposes, and the end of August, 1945, we delivered to Government agencies over 202 million proof gallons of vitally essential war alcohol. This was equivalent to about 14 per cent of all of the alcohol produced by all registered beverage distillers for the war program. (Less than 1 per cent of the company's consolidated net profit before taxes incidentally, was derived from the sale of war materials.)

Besides the inner satisfaction implicit in this record, we shall treasure, too, a letter of commendation, which we received from the Director of the Basic Chemical Division of the War Production Board under date of August 18, 1945, characterizing "a magnificent accomplishment in the service of the nation in its time of peril."

And, too, we have another highly gratifying letter from the Army Service Forces, Office of the Surgeon General. It refers to the contribution of one of our affiliate companies—Schenley Laboratories, producers of PENICILLIN—SCHENLEY. We quote, "We of the Medical Department fully realize what an important part your firm played in the development, production and delivery of supplies so vitally needed for the preservation of the lives of our fighting men and women."

MOTOR THIEF PREFERS PRISON TO PROBATION

Harold Vaughan, 22, of Detroit, Mich., made a quick decision yesterday when Federal Judge John P. Barnes gave him his choice of probation or a year and a day prison sentence after he pleaded guilty to stealing an automobile.

"I'll go to jail, Judge," he said.

When Judge Barnes recovered from his surprise he remarked that it was probably a good choice because if Vaughan came back to court as a violator of his probation, he couldn't expect any mercy. The court then asked Chester E. Hudson, 22, of Greenup, Ky., who was arrested with Vaughan, what his choice would be. Hudson said he would take a chance on living up to terms of probation for two years.

Later Vaughan told Assistant United States Atty. George G. Kelly that he wasn't sure he could behave himself outside of prison, but that he knew he could inside.

WOMAN STEALS STORE'S $6,832; GETS PROBATION

Mrs. Mayme Sommerfeld, 47, who was arrested on suspicion of stealing $6,832 while assistant cashier at a Michigan av. store, was found guilty of petty larcency yesterday and placed on probation for two years by Judge Charles S. Dougherty in Felony court. The charge was reduced from embezzlement after the court was notified that most of the missing money had been recovered. Mrs. Sommerfeld was arrested in the apartment of Clyde Crain, 26, a Negro, at 3612 Indiana av. A charge of adultery against Mrs. Sommerfeld was dismissed, and Crain was placed on probation for two years.

DOUBLE FEDERAL OFFENSE DRAWS TERM OF 3 YEARS

Oliver Neal, 26, who admitted driving a stolen car from Kansas to Chicago and raising a $1 money order to $81, was sentenced to three years and a day in federal prison yesterday by Judge William J. Campbell in federal District court. Neal was charged with violating the federal automobile theft act and postal laws. H was arrested Nov. 21 on the complaint of Mrs. Helen Simonds, 2323 Sheffield av., that he stole $400 worth of jewelry from her home. After his arrest Neal, who was a bellhop in the Congress hotel, married Mrs. Simonds' daughter, Berinthia, 18, an elevator operator.

The second of ten installments, in today's Post, takes you behind the scenes during the critical final days before we invaded North Africa. We sincerely believe this to be the war's most exciting and revealing document. Of course, it's in The Saturday Evening Post.

DETROIT STUDIES STRIKE'S EFFECT ON YULE BUYING

Dollar Sales Are Up, but Luxury Shopping Lags

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 18 [Special]—The effect on Christmas buying in Detroit of a month's loss of pay checks by 40,000 striking General Motors employes is being closely watched by local business men.

Idleness of that many consumers is certain to hurt buying power, explained Charles E. Boyd, secretary of the Retail Merchants association, but the loss is submerged in the over-all buying wave that is setting a record for Christmas sales.

Despite the buying splurge, Federal Reserve bank figures show that Detroit is about 3 per cent below the nation as a whole in Christmas purchases, Boyd said. Department store heads agreed that Yuletide sales, tho high, would be even higher if General Motors employes were receiving their usual pay checks.

Sale of Luxuries Lag

A survey of retail stores indicated the strike is having a more potent effect on buying than is apparent on the surface. Altho dollar sales are up, the so-called luxury item sales have not kept pace.

This indicates, it was said, that not only are General Motors strikers exercising caution in purchasing, but other industrial workers are stretching their funds in apparent anticipation of walkouts in other auto plants. Further strikes were forecast by R. J. Thomas, president of the CIO-United Automobile Workers, in announcing the union's plan to "divide and conquer."

Several sales managers reported that stores featuring cheaper or medium priced goods are enjoying a great business boom but that sales of more expensive items are lagging.

More Seeking Relief

The darker side of the picture also is reflected in the increasing number of strikers seeking relief aid. Daniel J. Ryan, general superintendent of the city welfare department, said G. M. workers are filing applications for aid at the rate of about 30 a day. Approval of city financial assistance for 60 families of strikers was granted during the last week, Ryan added.

Assistance given the families ranges from partial to full relief in amounts of $20 to $57 every two weeks.

Lineups at union strike kitchens are growing daily. The impact of the strike on the union was emphasized by UAW-CIO Treasurer George Addes in his recent demand for a dues increase from $1 to $1.50 a month. Union leaders have made frequent and urgent appeals to working members to contribute to strike funds.

Take Temporary Jobs

Some strikers have taken temporary jobs to try to soften the blow suffered by the severance of their incomes. Chrysler has hired some of them on laboring jobs paying about 87½ cents an hour.

When Detroit's 40,000 General Motors workers left their jobs on Nov. 19 they were receiving an average of $9 a day. They have been idle 19 working days, causing an average loss in wages of $171 for each, while their home maintenance and other living expenses continue.

2 Dealers Face Contempt on OPA Price Violations

Judge John P. Barnes in federal District court yesterday ordered George and Myron Golemis, banana merchants at 936 Randolph st., to show cause Dec. 26 why they should not be held in contempt of court for violations of office of price administration regulations. The OPA obtained an injunction against the defendants July 30.

FLORIDA, WHERE FUN IS FUN—AT MOST ANY PRICE

Life Begins at About $12 a Day

BY GAIL COMPTON

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

West Palm Beach, Fla., Dec. 18—You can have a lot of fun in this town for $12.55 a day.

The average tourist can enjoy the pursuits of the wealthy for a nominal cost if he is willing to forgo the luxurious trappings of exclusive surroundings.

The tourist can start out in the morning from his motor court room, which costs $3 a night. Breakfast can be had in a cafeteria for 50 cents. Then 18 holes of golf at one of the good public fee courses costs $3 for greens fee. Lunch at another cafeteria finds a fairly adequate meal for another 50 cents.

Swimming Is Cheap

Sun bathing and a swim in a pool is reasonable at the public pools where admission, a locker, and a towel add 75 cents to the day's expenses. Ocean swimming, of course, is free.

If you want to follow the swim with some fishing, $1.55 gets you onto a long pier, and you'll be equipped with rod, reel, and bait. A few hours' fishing will give you enough food for a week. And if you have trouble baiting your line there are 20 people standing around you eager to offer free advice.

Evening calls for a broiled lobster dinner which comes to $1 including soup and dessert. To polish off the night in millionaire style, an obliging cabbie will take you to the nearest dice game where you can lose $2, quit, and not be a piker. After the gambling you can adjourn to a night club where for a 25 cent bottle of beer you can watch the dancing and listen to a good orchestra.

Some Other Prices

When you wind up back at the motor court you have enjoyed yourself in a millionaire's playground and if you think the price of $12.55 was high, just compare it to what the smart set pays for the same activity.

A room in a swank hotel for the night costs $12, and you can pay around $800 a month for a hotel cottage if you feel flush. Breakfast costs $1.25. The morning round of golf is played at one of the private courses where you pay $350 for a season membership. Lunch at the right spot will come to about $2.25.

Supper at the Taboo night spot is $5 with all the trappings. Swank gambling is done at Bradley's Casino, where evening dress is obligatory and a man with $2 to bet feels very lonesome. There are night clubs which offer entertainment and sell highballs for 80 cents each.

HE DENIES GUILT IN KIDNAPING OF WEST COAST GIRL

San Jose, Cal., Dec. 18 (AP)—Thomas H. McMonigle today pleaded innocent to a charge of kidnaping Thora Chamberlain, 15, before Superior Judge William F. James, a few minutes after the Santa Clara county grand jury had returned an indictment against him. He also pleaded innocent to a second count of child stealing.

The court fixed Jan. 14 as the tentative trial date and set McMonigle's bond at $25,000. He was returned to San Quentin prison.

McMonigle's formal plea marked the second time today he had flatly repudiated the asserted confession announced last Saturday by the FBI, in which he was reported as admitting he had asked the San Jose High school girl into his car to show him the way to Santa Cruz last Nov. 2, later had shot her, and then tossed her body into the sea.

ALIMONY ROW BEGINS TO FEEL SPIRIT OF YULE

While county jail employes decorated the institution's corridors with Christmas trimmings yesterday, inhabitants of Alimony row played pinochle and discussed their hopes that they would get a "good deal" when they appear tomorrow or Friday in court to be released if they promise convincingly enough to support their families.

Edward Rohder, 25, of 1707 N. Washtenaw av. said he hopes to get out of jail in time to buy Christmas gifts for his wife, Anne, 24, and their two little girls. Another Alimony row inhabitant who was worried about getting out in time to buy gifts for his children is James W. Fredericks, 26, of 1600 Byron st. He said he would like to get back to work so he can pay the $165 back alimony he owes his divorced wife, Evelyn, 24.

William Zonavetch, 39, of 2428 Haddon av. owes separate maintenance of $22 a week dating back to March, 1945, to his estranged wife, Camille. He said his best gift would be a chance to spend the holidays with her and their three children. Most of the men in Alimony row said they have brothers or other close relatives just out of service with whom they would like to spend Christmas.

BRITISH INCITE ARABS, CLAIMS ZIONIST CHIEF

Cleveland, O., Dec. 18 (AP)—Dr. Abba Hillel Silver, chairman of the Zionist Emergency council, returned from Palestine by plane today and declared in an interview "the tension in Palestine and in the near east is fostered by British agents."

"The Arab league," he said, "is a British instrument and it has but one purpose—the cementing of the Arab world into a solid bloc against possible soviet penetration in the middle east which would endanger British imperial interests."

Dr. Silver, who is head of the temple here, asserted that British troops in Palestine take advantage of every opportunity to display armed force. He added: "We cannot do less than demand that 100,000 Jews be admitted to Palestine at the earliest possible moment."

KELLY REVEALS HIS DREAM OF A SUPER-CHICAGO

A super Chicago of the future was envisioned yesterday by Mayor Kelly in an address before a Rotary club luncheon in the Morrison hotel. The Chicago he described would have $30,202,000 worth of new elementary and high schools, $84,996,000 worth of new sewers, plus a new airport, unified transportation, and resurfaced streets—all worked in with community planning.

"Thru long range planning," the mayor said, "we are doing everything in our power to insure that Chicago will attain its full potentiality as a city second to none."

The club members were told by the mayor that the backbone of any city is its local neighborhoods, and that "we want Chicago to combine the advantages of a large metropolis, at the same time providing the desirable features of quiet, small city life."

Neighborhood developments, the mayor said, will have streets designed to discourage speedy vehicular traffic. Fast traffic, he said, will be carried to and thru the neighborhoods by a system of superhighways and express ways.

IT'S NOT A LOAN

Sen. Brooks discussed the so-called British loan with refreshing candor. Some of the details of the arrangement which he brought to light are interesting, such as the provision that the scanty repayment for lend-lease, if and when made, is to be in pounds sterling which we are bound to spend in England or the empire, either for buildings or for a tremendous expansion of something like the Rhodes scholarships. But his keen analysis of the agreement itself deserves the attention of every American citizen.

It is not a loan. It is a gift. The British assured us in advance that they did not want a loan and could not pay one back. Their record of default on their debts resulting from the last war, at a period when their financial strength was vastly greater than it is today, leaves little doubt as to what will happen when payments become due.

As Sen. Brooks pointed out, the agreement is full of cunningly worded escape clauses. The only remote possibility that we will obtain any substantial refund would be that we would abandon our protective tariff and admit large volumes of British goods to compete with American manufactures and depress the wages of American workmen. That is not remotely possible politically in this country, however sound the idea might be from an economic standpoint. When we fail to offer such a market to British goods the British will consider themselves released from the obligation to pay and they will not pay.

The agreement is not for a loan but for a gift. The gift is to be of dollars. Where the Truman administration is to find the dollars no one in authority has explained. The current loan drive is going badly. Mr. Truman and his subordinates are already operating the government at a huge deficit. The only way they can continue to finance government operations and the large added burden of the advance to Britain will be by printing money, either directly or thru the inflationary device of loading the banks up with government bonds.

Yet the administration pretends to be in terror of inflation. It is making a great to-do about "holding the line" on prices. Prices are unmanageable because people have an excess of money in their pockets and their bank accounts and can't find the things they want to buy. The OPA didn't repeal the law of supply and demand. It merely undertook, largely unsuccessfully, to ignore it. OPA can tell a merchant that he can't sell an item for more than a certain price, but it can't force him to stock that item and sell it at a loss, nor can it force a manufacturer to make goods for sale at prices that will cost him money.

The great need of the United States at the present time is increased goods with which to satisfy consumer demands and thereby check inflation. The British are not going to let the American dollars we give them stand idly as credits. They are going to buy things in the American market or spend the dollars with other nations who will try to buy these things at a time when we are not producing enough to satisfy our own wants. The agreement with Britain will result in further depleting the already scarce store of goods in this country, thereby increasing the inflationary pressure on our prices.

That these effects will be produced is as certain as sunset. But, as Sen. Brooks says, it will be a mistake if we blame the British and damage what should be good relations between our two countries. The British negotiators were looking after British interests. That was their job and they did it well. They are not to be blamed for tricking the people of the United States. The terms of the agreement are all open and its result completely expectable. If the blame is to be placed it must be placed on those whose duty it was to look after the interests of the United States.

"I think," said Sen. Brooks, "we are having the wool pulled over our eyes, but I do not think it is being pulled over our eyes by the British. I think it is being pulled over our eyes by men who are misrepresenting America again and sacrificing the interests of this country to the interests of the mother country—for some reason which I do not undertake to understand."

In his most effective treatment of the question Sen. Brooks has offered that leadership in Americanism which is so badly needed in Washington, virtually controled, as it is, by foreign propaganda. The men who are directing our national policy have their aspirations and, worse, their loyalties, fixed in other countries.

GET THE SCIENTISTS BACK TO WORK

Ever since the atomic bombs fell on Japan, the scientists of America whose research led to the perfection of the weapon have been too occupied with the results of their handiwork to be of much use to themselves or any one else. They have been busy viewing with alarm, running down to Washington to testify about how the horror they have let loose can be brought under control, holding conferences at which they scare one another, or signing petitions.

The laboratories where the scientists ought to be busy are practically deserted. Atomic fission has opened up a whole new area which urgently requires investigation. The new institutes of nuclear physics and of metals at the University of Chicago have a lot of work ahead of them, but where are their staffs? Every other center of advanced study in the country is probably asking the same question.

The scientists would get back on their job if the army would relax its clutch on them. The Manhattan ordnance district, thru which the army gets its stock of atomic bombs, still is holding many eminent men whose work is done and whose services are no longer required. Production of atomic bombs is on an assembly line basis by now. There is no reason for tying up the time and brain power of the best theoretical scientists in the country after they have finished their job. They ought to be allowed to return to their laboratories and start getting answers to the question, "Where do we go from here?'

A few army generals who are trying to promote themselves a lifetime career on the basis of the atomic bomb, to which they contributed little and of which they understand less, must not be allowed to put the country's best scientific minds in cold storage. If the scientists were allowed to get back to work, to exchange information, and to have access to atomic material required for new research, we might be getting a start on how to live with and master the problems of the atomic age, instead of sitting around wondering if we'll all be blown up some bright day.

SPLINTERS OF LAW

David A. Simmons, the president of the American Bar association, stated a plain fact when he said that the New Deal Supreme court justices were not interested in making the law known and clear to the nation, but were concerned only in reading their personal political, social, and economic theories into the law.

Mr. Simmons contrasted the present court with the judicial record of former Chief Justice Edward Douglass White, who, in 27 years on the Supreme court, wrote 700 majority opinions, 10 concurring opinions, and only 33 dissenting opinions. "He recognized," said Mr. Simmons, "that the first principle in the supremacy of law was certainty."

Compare Justice White's record with that of the New Deal justices, who in 1943 registered dissents against 43 per cent of the court's majority decisions and in 1944 against 63 per cent of them. "During the last term of the court," Mr. Simmons said, "there were almost as many dissents or qualified concurrences as there were majority opinions."

This diversity of opinion approached the ludicrous in the recent Associated Press decision, when the five majority decisions gave five different reasons for upholding the decisions of the lower court and all five opinions gave different reasons from the opinion of the lower court, the opinion of which, in turn, disagreed with the opinion of two different attorneys general who had taken part in the proceedings. Further, the lower court was split two to one.

"Is the applicable rule of law so difficult to ascertain?" asked Mr. Simmons. "Or is each judge seeking to extract from the atmosphere about him, or from his own personal sense of justice—social or otherwise—his own notion of equity, which he writes into law?"

It would seem apparent that this is exactly what the justices are endeavoring to do under the New Deal, in which event they become, as Mr. Simmons says, partisans and not judges. The people are not interested in the predilections of the bench; they are interested in the clarity and uniformity of the law as applied to similar facts and circumstances, irrespective of the persons before the court.

THE PROFIT MOTIVE AND MR. ATTLEE

Whatever else one may think of the extraordinary proposal of R. J. Thomas of the CIO that the government of Great Britain intervene as a large stockholder in the General Motors strike, the appeal is not without its elements of unconscious humor. Mr. Thomas, as president of the United Auto Workers, addressed his plea to Prime Minister Attlee. The affair is likely to prove a greater headache to Mr. Attlee than it will to General Motors.

At a time when the British government is trying to get congress to approve a loan of $4,400,000,000, on the ground that Britain is broke, Mr. Thomas comes crashing into the china shop with the news that the British government holds 434,000 shares of General Motors common stock, valued on the present market at 32½ million dollars. This attracts notice to the fact that other British stock holdings in American corporations are worth approximately three-quarters of a billion dollars.

Not content to stop there, Mr. Thomas asked that Mr. Attlee "make known" his feelings that "profits are indeed the concern of the workers and the owners of any company." Mr. Attlee, who is busy nationalizing the mines, the transport and communications system, the Bank of England, and a number of other British industries and institutions, is thus called upon to indorse the system of free enterprise which he is at pains to tear down.

If Mr. Attlee doesn't come clean with Mr. Thomas in a hurry, we suppose that there will be nothing for the UAW to do but recruit a sort of CIO foreign legion to go picket 10 Downing street.

WHY?

[Illinois State Journal]

Study of testimony accruing in the Pearl Harbor investigation may beget confusion as to some details, but there is one question, emblazoned in blood, which impresses itself thruout.

The probe, to date, has witnessed a conglomeration of boasts and confessions. Almost every one connected with the military and naval establishment in 1941 who still lives, and who has appeared before the congressional committee, has let it be surmised that he was in the "know" in those dark days.

If, as practically every one proudly admits, he knew the situation with Japan was critical; if, as has been confessed, war toward the end of November was inevitable; if, as almost every one agrees, there was knowledge a blow would fall somewhere—why, then, was it that our Pacific fleet was concentrated in snug little Pearl Harbor, ship lashed alongside ship, in a manner that presented the most inviting and notorious target in all naval history?

To the nation in general, and to the families of those valiant 3,000 martyrs in particular, those who had to do with the indefensibly stupid maneuver had better give answer.

And the explanation had better make sense.

SPEAKING OF SNOW

If you think that Chicago's heaviest snowfalls came in the good old days before atoms or autos were dreamed of, when you were a small boy trudging thru mountainous drifts in the 1890s to deliver your newspapers, you're wrong. They have happened within the memory of the very young. They belong to the traditions of the bobby-sock girls.

* * *

This city's deepest snowstorm for a 24-hour period was on Jan. 30, 1939, when the measuring rods of experts marked 14.9 inches. The storm of March 25-26, 1930, was much heavier and is more clearly remembered by the population. It lasted for 31 hours and 23 minutes, and piled up 19.2 inches in the weather bureau instruments. [Statistics by Roberts Mann of the forest preserve district.]

* * *

The 1930 demonstration was a howling blizzard, with prodigious drifting, and a fine sight from a warm window. Many diligent citizens stayed at home. We watched it until nightfall, because we had no urgent duty at the office, but after dinner we sallied forth to give the elements a battle. In the vestibule we encountered the sturdy small boy who lived downstairs, encrusted with snow and gasping for breath. "I'm going to work," we told him. He exclaimed in protest and dismay: "O, Mr. Collins!" But we got there and back. The elevated always delivers its man.

* * *

These snowfalls were small affairs when compared with the national records. Consider these statistics, also supplied by Mr. Mann: 60 inches at Giant Forest, Cal., in one day; 42 inches at Angola, N. Y., in two days; 54 inches at The Dalles, Ore., in three days, and 96 inches at Vanceboro, Me., in four days.

WINGS OF WINTER

Brave little vagabonds out in the cold;
There is snow in the air, and the rock-a-bye bough
That sheltered wee nestlings ere summer grew old

Blown like the leaves, they are tumbled along;
Bright eyes alert for a morsel of bread—
Skies hold no echo of rollicking song,
Forlorn on the doorstep they beg to be fed.

I spread them a table beneath the elm tree,
Where they nested and sang all the bright summer thru;
O, yes, those were robins and wrens, I'll agree,
But these tiny sparrows need sustenance, too.

How they flock to the feast! How they chatter and "sing,"
In praise that is warm and endearing to me—
Then off like a flash they're again on the wing (Cold must be their comfort on hilltop or lea).

"He cares for the sparrows." Cannot you and I
Spare food, in our mercy for all helpless things?
And bird-song again will cascade down the sky,

When you were young and very wise,
It always gave you great surprise
To hear your elders sigh and say,
"O, life is such a weary way!"

Life seemed to you to be such fun;
For as the days passed, one by one,
Each some new joy in your path flung—
You laughed at life when you were young.

When you were young, you did not know
How wise your elders were; but, O,
You since have learned what life can mean—
It's different now you're seventeen!

[The Friend of the Yanks will answer questions of service men, veterans, and their dependents by mail if a stamped envelope is sent to 435 N. Michigan av. The Tribune's veterans' bureau, 1 S. Dearborn st., Superior 0200, gives personal interviews.]

H. P. asks: "Can a GI go to any school he chooses? I have been told he cannot and that he must go to a school approved by the government. I was told I could pay the tuition fee and then put in a claim for subsistence pay even tho the school is not approved."

A veteran's education will be paid for by the government only when he is attending a school approved by the department of education of the state in which the school is located. The veterans administration does not pass upon qualifications of the schools; it only approves attendance by a veteran after the state has passed upon the school. The education section of the GI bill says a veteran is entitled to subsistence only when attending school under provisions of the bill. The provision referred to is a state approved school. Therefore if you attend an unapproved school at your expense you would not be going to school under provisions of the law and would not be entitled to the subsistence allowance.

POST-WAR MALARIA

AMONG the problems of the returning service man is the possibility of recurrent attacks of malaria. This question concerns mainly those who served in the South Pacific. Some are apparently cured but others hold on to the parasites and can anticipate a return of symptoms.

The taking of atabrin or quinine by members of the armed forces was a routine practice in regions where the causative mosquito abounded. These chemicals merely control or prevent the acute episodes of chills and fever. They do not kill but suppress the offending germs.

So long as the drugs are administered, the individual is not aware of the disorder, but when they are discontinued, manifestations may ensue. There are rumors of a new English preparation called "Paludrin," which is effective in destroying the "bugs," but to date we have no definite information on the product.

Those who continue to experience discomfort, even tho removed from the infested areas, may be considered to have chronic malaria. Attacks of chills, fever, generalized aching, nausea, and abdominal pain are not unusual. These manifestations respond quickly to treatment. Regardless of how thoro the therapy may be, relapses can occur, but those who received inadequate doses are more likely to be bothered.

Barring reinfections, these incidents may appear at varying periods for a long time, but ultimately the body develops an immunity and the organisms finally die out. In other words, nature is on our side and, by observing the usual health precautions, the process can be accelerated.

Following a flareup, many complain of weakness, fatigue, irritability, weight loss, and headache which lasts for a week or two. In a few, malaise persists but many authorities doubt if it can be attributed to malaria. Now and then other afflictions are responsible including tropical diseases such as amebic dysentery or hookworm. In others, it is functional and disappears after adjustments have been made.

A considerable number of soldiers with the chronic form encounter distressing headaches during these quiescent intervals. They are located over the forehead; are seldom intense or throbbing in character; and are often referred to as "a sense of pressure." The disorder is usually present on arising but vanishes in a few hours. Exercise seems to aggravate the trouble and relief is not obtained with ordinary headache remedies. Zeligs studied 25 of these patients and found that a high percentage responded to nicotinic acid. The results were not permanent, but eased the sensation sufficiently to warrant using the chemical.

It is unfortunate that more cannot be done to cure victims of malaria. The vast majority are up and about and capable of normal activity. Bouts of fever can be expected but eventually many will overcome the malady.

SURGERY IN HYPERTENSION

A. R. writes: Has anything further been done along the line of removing certain nerves in high blood pressure?

REPLY

This problem has not been settled, altho startling results have been obtained in early cases. The main reason why a definite answer cannot be given is that sufficient time has not elapsed to follow a large number of patients over several years. At the end of this period it will be possible to ascertain whether the procedure is effective.

SCARED

M. J. writes: What causes a person to have bad dreams and wake up with the heart pounding practically every night?

REPLY

Unpleasant dreams and a palpitating ticker go together like ham and eggs in fact, the pulse rate normally increases with any form of excitement. Try going to bed without your troubles and refrain from eating before retiring. Perhaps then the gremlins will leave you alone.

NEURALGIA RELIEF

R. C. writes: Is there any newly developed drug to control the pain of intercostal neuralgia? I am in agony.

REPLY

Painkillers will not relieve the cause but they do add to comfort. The injection of novocaine will give relief and, if the disorder is longstanding, the nerve can be severed.

Listen, the Dead

[Lines from an American soldier who fought in both the European and Pacific campaigns and is sweating out the transportation muddle in the far east.]

The good people of my community have erected a war memorial on the courthouse lawn. An impressive dedication ceremony was held a few weeks ago, and now the marble memorial must gleam white in the winter sun. That small town in Illinois is 5,000 miles away, but I see the thing every time I shut my eyes. I'm not going to like that impressive monument, and as often as possible I will avoid the corner of the square where it stands.

It is difficult to explain my aversion to a war memorial, altho in a sense it is also dedicated to me. My only rationalization is that it is cheap, filthy cheap. No matter how much in taxes went into it or how much skill and art were expended, the thing is cheap. Nearly all who have been overseas think the same. We have our own memories of the brave and the dead. We resent the trespassing into our field of reverence of clean glowing symbols of cold marble to commemorate a war that was nothing but filth and horror.

There is something wrong in building in memory of this orgy of bloodshed. It would be much more fitting to select a small American city, evacuate the population, and let the war department go to work, artillery, mortars, aerial bombardment.

Then, when it is all over, when the dust has settled and the fires have winked out, when nothing is left but rubble, masonry dust, charred wood, and twisted metal, then hold the dedication ceremony in the ruins, for there it is, what the war has done, the scars it has left, the graves it has filled. Nothing is as eloquent as a ruined city, nothing except a gaunt, fire blackened wall rising defiantly. There all is reproduced with hellish accuracy except the smell of war on the evening breeze, burned wood, cordite, and the penetrating stench of the inadequately buried dead. So stand the towns of Europe today: Le Havre, St. Lo, Aachen, Julich, Köln.

Too many sleep beneath regimented white crosses to be consecrated by a few monuments. Too many inside mattress covers enrich the ground of other nations. He had a wife, and a kid he never saw; then the mortar shell. This guy loved a girl back home; they were to be married when he went back on rotation; then the breakthru, the machine gun fire. That boy was homesick; he lit a match to look at mom's picture, a sniper sighted in on the flame, squeezed off his shot.

Let them sleep where they are. They're comfortable there. A marble monument? Something of grace and beauty? It just isn't right. I found a fitting memorial one evening on the Cologne plain. I found it in a trench. First it was a German position, but we chased them out and took it ourselves. They retired to the woods and started sniping.

The litter of war was everywhere. K-ration boxes, entrenching tools, ammunition boxes. A round, familiar object caught my eye. I picked it up and examined it. There was the memorial: An American helmet with a bullet hole thru both sides, caked thick with mud, stained an unwholesome reddish black, and on the ground beneath my feet a large dark stain. The helmet is rusted now, the bloodstain washed away by the rain, the whole covered by the snow. Soon the trench will be filled in before the spring plowing.

The peasant will till the soil where once men died. Back home the bronze will tarnish, the birds will build their nests. Nothing will be left but memories and the melancholy sound that comes to so many of us. That sound is made up of the voices of those we knew who are dead. These I will remember while I live. They will never be plowed under, nor will they tarnish with the passage of time.

THE LUMBER SHORTAGE

Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 15—Your editorial on building material shortages was very interesting, altho the public seems very much in the dark as to the fundamental reasons behind the much lamented lumber shortage. Being a lumberman, I will dwell briefly on the principal causes. The principal reason for a lumber shortage during the summer was that, before he died, Mr. Roosevelt furnished lend-lease to England 30,000 complete homes for the bombed out war workers. Now that Mr. Truman has converted 29 billions of lend-lease into a gift, this means that the American GI must go without living quarters, in order that Roosevelt's British friends can be accommodated first.

The reason for the present lumber shortage is that a strike in most west coast lumber mills has been in effect since Sept. 24 and is still not settled. The New Deal soft pedals this strike as it is the fruit of their own mistaken labor policy. Another reason for the present lumber shortage is that while Chester Bowles set ceilings on lumber for domestic consumption, he failed to apply them to foreign trade, and Britain and other foreigners are marching away with scarce American lumber because they are in a position to pay slightly higher than the ceiling price.

E. G. FAIRFIELD

THE DEC. 7 "WARNING"

Freeport, Ill., Dec. 8—Gen. Marshall, chief of staff at the time of the Pearl Harbor attack, has naively or dumbly supplied one of the missing pieces of the puzzle picture. He has testified that he sent the message of warning to Pearl Harbor by slow frate, at the last minute, in order that the Japs should not read it and learn that their coming attack was expected. It has been previously explained in detail that the Jap attacking force had orders to turn back at once, and not make the attack if their approach was discovered before the moment of the attack.

The Roosevelt strategy demanded that the Jap attack be made on an unsuspecting and unprepared victim, to inflame the American people for all-out war. It was desirable that the Washington "planners" should make a gesture of warning to Pearl Harbor, to clear them of criminal negligence in case of a subsequent investigation, but it was more important that the Pearl Harbor force should not receive the warning in time, or that the Japs should not be frightened away by a tip-off that they were expected. If Gen. Marshall did this curious thing on his own initiative, he convicts himself of an unbelievable dumbness. If he did it on orders from above, he convicts his superiors of a horrible duplicity in making a burnt offering of Pearl Harbor to jump the country into a war before they were prepared for it.

HUNGER AND COMMUNISM

Chicago, Dec. 10—Sen. Eastland's observation, "The Communists know that a hungry, chaotic Germany will and must embrace communism and that a soviet Germany would lead to the sovietizing of the smaller nations of western Europe and the collapse of democracy outside Britain and the United States," quite obviously leaves us only two courses: either we must see to it that Germany becomes less "hungry and chaotic," or we must be prepared to accept a communistic Europe. Is this part of the "democracy" we fought for?

U. S. SAYS FIRMS RETARD BETTER TELEVISION SETS

Charges Conspiracy Delays Progress

New York, Dec. 18 [Special]—Opening of a new field of entertainment and education thru development of improved television equipment has been delayed for years by the conspiring of British and American corporations, the department of justice charged today in filing an anti-trust suit in federal court here.

The defendants were accused of anti-trust violations in the manufacture and sale of two revolutionary television systems by which television can be shown on screens as large as those in motion picture houses.

The new television ideas, developed by Scophony, Ltd., a British concern which obtained basic patents, are technically called "supersonic" and "skiatron." The skiatron tube proved to be the basis of radar development, an important factor in the allies' war victory.

Large Pictures Possible

Principal advantage of the systems is that they make possible the reproduction of large sized pictures. While the best satisfactory American systems offer reproductions of about 4 by 6 inches and 6 by 8 inches, the new systems permit showings of images 20 by 24 inches on home sets, 3 by 4 feet on school and club sets, and 12 by 15 feet on theater screens.

"Under the ordinary television commonly in use today," the complaint said, "such large screen projection is impossible without serious loss of light.

"Except for large images produced under the Scophony systems, ordinary televised pictures appear on the end of the reception tube and can be enlarged practically only thru the use of mirrors. Loss of brilliance involved in the later optical process has thus far retarded the commercial development of large screen television."

The Scophony system, the government explained, involves the use of an outside source of light similar to that used in motion picture projection.

Follows Film Technique

"The supersonic system," said Atty. Gen. Clark, in whose name the suit was filed, "is able to employ a strong independent light source to amplify and enlarge the television signal received by the Scophony receiver. In this it draws on the technique and experience of motion picture projection."

Paramount Pictures, Inc., is one of the defendants in the action which named five corporations and three individuals. Another is Paramount's wholly owned subsidiary, Television Productions, Inc. A third is Scophony, Ltd., the British firm.

The other defendant corporations are the General Precision Equipment corporation, alleged to be the largest single stockholder in the 20th Century Fox corporation, and the Scophony Corporation of America. The latter allegedly was organized by Paramount's Television Productions and by General Precision in furtherance of the conspiracy.

Officials Accused, Too

The government charged the defendants divided the world into two non-competitive areas in an illegal cartel arrangement providing that: Scophony, Ltd., would not compete within the Western hemisphere. Television Productions and General Precision would not compete within the Eastern hemisphere. Scophony Corporation of America would not compete in either.

After Television Productions and General Precision entered into a conspiracy whereby they "have complete control over the promotion, utilization or suppression of the Scophony inventions within the Western hemisphere, particularly in the United States," Clark charged, they failed to "make any substantial or serious effort to develop and exploit" those rights or "to promote the use and sale of products thereunder."

ASSERTS RATION OF GAS REVIVED COMMUNITY LIFE

Gasoline rationing helped restore a spirit of neighborliness to rural communities, Mrs. Roy C. F. Weagly of Hagerstown, Md., president of the Associated Women of the American Farm Bureau federation, said yesterday in Chicago. The federation is holding its 27th annual convention in Hotel Sherman.

"I think the automobile harmed the small town," Mrs. Weagly said. "Gasoline rationing made us start to save community life in the country."

Rural community life, as built thru farm bureaus, amounts to a country-wide membership of 986,000 families, she said. Mrs. Weagly has watched and participated in farm bureau work since 1918, when her husband organized the bureau in Washington county, Md., her life-long home.

Commenting on recommendations for federal aid for rural hospitalization and education made by Sen. Hill [D., Ala.] in a speech to the women Monday, Mrs. Weagly declared: "Our resolutions favor reasonable federal grants to supplement state funds, but, make no mistake, we still believe in local initiative.

BRICKER WARNS BAR OF DANGER IN AGENCY RULE

Cincinnati, O., Dec. 18 (AP)—The lawyers of the nation must see to it that laws governing the people are under the jurisdiction of constitutionally provided courts instead of administrative boards, former Gov. Bricker of Ohio asserted today.

Speaking before the 68th annual meeting of the American Bar association, the 1944 Republican Vice Presidential candidate declared:

"In the last few years we have seen the expansion and encroachment of absolutism in our government and thruout the world.

"Administrative boards, created for political reasons, are judicial in character and encroach upon the rights of citizens."

In a meeting of the association's house of delegates eight of nine resolutions were adopted in which the united nations organization was supported.

START ON 600,000 HOUSING UNITS IN 1946 PREDICTED

Construction work will be started on 600,000 new housing units and at least 525,000 will be completed in 1946, Boris Shishkin, economist of the American Federation of Labor, predicted yesterday in addressing a reconversion conference sponsored by the Public Administration Clearing house.

Shishkin said a shortage of materials, rather than a shortage of labor, may retard the housing plans. He added that a limited shortage of masons may develop because of "a reluctance to build all-frame housing."

This "reluctance," he said, will result from the acute lumber shortage and the probability that green lumber available will crack, buckle, and warp, contributing to post-construction problems and difficulty of maintenance.

Burglars Get $50,000 in Jewelry

The Christmas rush ended abruptly yesterday for the Lincoln Jewelers and Optometrists, 2415 Lincoln av., when burglars broke into the store, took nearly $50,000 in watches, rings, and jewelry from the vault, and left only a small number of fountain pens and cheaper jewelry in the showcases.

The burglars had cut the store's alarm system in two places, but apparently failed to foil the tear gas alarm when they battered off the vault doors. Neighbors said they saw two men with towels about their heads appear at the front door about 3:30 a. m., but did not report this to police. The theft was discovered when Ralph Goodman, proprietor, arrived to open the store.

HOUSE APPROVES 160 MILLION FUND FOR VET HOUSING

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18 (AP)—The house today approved a 160 million dollar temporary housing program for distressed war veterans and their families.

It passed and returned to the senate for action on an amendment legislation authorizing the expenditure of that amount by the national housing administrator to acquire temporary federal owned housing no longer needed and send it into housing shortage areas.

Approximately 100,000 units are expected to be made available to municipalities without cost—except for land sites—and to educational institutions needing housing for GI students.

Farmer Freed by Court in Wounding of Youth

Harry Gulbransen, 57, who has a farm at Sauk trail and State st., Bloom township, was dismissed yesterday on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon by Police Magistrate William Kane in Homewood county highway police court. He was arrested Sept. 22 after firing a shotgun blast near his home which wounded Weldon Houston, 17, Negro, of 323 E. 16th st., Chicago Heights. He said dogs had been annoying the goats which he raises and that he fired when he heard something moving near them.

EX-CHUM LOSES APPEAL TO KEEP GENIUS' $120,770

A 1943 Circuit court order directing Robert M. Hoffman, 40, of Barrington, to pay a $120,770 judgment to his former friend, Richard M. Genius Jr., 37, an heir of the late Charles H. Morse, a founder of Fairbanks, Morse & Co., was upheld yesterday by the Appellate court.

Genius, in the original trial before Judge Walter J. La Buy, then sitting on the Circuit bench and now a federal District judge, charged that Hoffman had obtained the money fraudulently by raising the amounts of checks that Genius had given to him. One check for $15.05, it was charged, had been changed to $6,115.05.

Court Rejects Gift Plea

Hoffman countered that Genius had promised to give him $150,000 for his efforts to find Genius a nice, wholesome girl who would "become Mrs. Genius." The Appellate court rejected this assertion.

"We are convinced Hoffman's testimony as to the alleged gift is false in toto," the decision said. "It is a reasonable inference from the evidence that, when Hoffman found his scheme had been discovered, he knew that he could not show any legitimate right to the large sums of money he had obtained from Genius' bank accounts and he was forced to invent the story that so-called 'gift checks' represented partial payment on account of the $150,000."

Tax on Credulity

"What," the decision continued, "would cause Genius to make a gift of $150,000 to Hoffman when he had pondered over the amount he would invest in Bergonize [Hoffman's wall treating company]?"

Evidence, the decision stated, showed that Genius had quibbled over whether to invest $10,000 or $6,000 in the wall treating company and finally had settled on the smaller figure.

"That would tax the credulity of any one," continued the decision, "to believe that Genius would give Hoffman the $150,000."

The Appellate court judges, the decision went on, carefully examined the checks which the lower court found had been raised and ruled themselves in accord with the finding that they were fraudulent.

The Appellate court decision was written by Justice Kickham Scanlan and was concurred in by Judges Hugo M. Friend and John J. Sullivan.

REVEAL HITLER ORDERS FOR WAR IN MIDDLE EAST

Aimed at Iraq Thru Turkey, Egypt

NUERNBERG, Germany, Dec. 18 (AP)—Adolf Hitler's top secret war orders showed today that the fuehrer once planned to invade the middle east, to wage war on Turkey if necessary and made ready in 1940 to occupy the whole of France.

When Col. Gen. Alfred Jodl, German army chief of staff, was captured last May he reluctantly surrendered a leather brief case which he seemed to cherish more than any other possession. The case contained more than 50 of Hitler's original war orders.

Some of the orders have been submitted in evidence in the war crimes trial, in which Jodl is a defendant. The remainder, kept in a bombproof safe, were made available to the Associated Press.

Britain No. 1 Enemy

War order No. 9, dated Nov. 29, 1939, indicated that Hitler considered Britain his most formidable enemy and that the "prerequisite for final victory is to beat England." To do this, once the Germans had disposed of the "British-French expeditionary force," Hitler planned that his navy and air force should bomb and blockade Britain into submission.

Apparently realizing that he had underestimated the British, Hitler issued order No. 30 on May 23, 1941, announcing his intention of supporting Iraq against Britain as the first step of a middle east offensive designed to weaken the British.

"I have therefore decided," a subsequent order said, "to drive developments in the middle east forward by supporting Iraq. Whether and how the English position—in connection with the offensive against the Suez canal—can be brought to collapse will be decided only after Barbarossa [an army code name for the invasion of Russia]."

Concentric Attack

Not putting all his eggs in the Iraqian basket, however, Hitler also ordered a "coördination of the fight against the British position in the Mediterranean and the near and middle east by a concentric attack which is planned from Libya thru Egypt, from Bulgaria thru Turkey and possibly also from Transcaucasia thru Iran."

The Bulgarian-Turkish drive was necessary, according to Hitler generalship, "in consideration that English reinforcements are to be expected in the near and middle east and especially for rendering the Suez canal secure" and with the aim "of attacking the British position at the Suez canal from the east."

"For this purpose," one order read, "preparations must be made as early as possible to assemble such strong forces in Bulgaria as are necessary to make Turkey tractable or to break its resistance by force of arms."

Feared Subversive Action

Six months after France surrendered to Germany in the early stages of the war, Hitler became restive over possible "subversive resistance movements . . . in those parts of the French colonial empire [North Africa] which are now commanded by Gen. Weygand."

Order No. 19, dated Dec. 10, 1940, stated that if such resistance appeared, "the quick occupation of sections of the French motherland now still unoccupied is to be prepared."

"At the same time the French home fleet and sections of the French air force stationed at home ports must be seized or at least prevented from going over to the enemy. Preparations of this undertaking are to be camouflaged in order to avoid alarming the French."

TEACHERS' PAY REPORT GIVEN IN FIVE CITY STUDY

Salaries of Chicago elementary school teachers are higher than corresponding salaries in Philadelphia, Pa., but lower than those paid in New York, Detroit, Mich., and Los Angeles, Cal., a preliminary report covering a survey made by the Civic federation disclosed yesterday.

The computations were made after adjustments for varying length of work weeks in the schools of the various cities had been made. The report showed that most elementary school teachers in Chicago receive $2,625 a year, compared with $2,364 in Philadelphia, $3,117 in New York, $2,638 in Detroit, and $2,980 in Los Angeles.

Chicago high school teachers, the report said, receive an average of $3,800 a year, compared with $4,080 in Philadelphia, $4,850 in New York, $3,400 in Detroit, and $3,470 in Los Angeles. In some of the cities surveyed, the elementary schools extend only to the sixth grade, the remaining studies being conducted in junior and senior high schools.

The report observed that there is no present or prospective shortage of teachers in Chicago schools. A complete, final report on teachers' salaries will be issued next year, Douglas Sutherland, executive secretary of the federation, said.

Getting them out of crowded coastal cities as fast as possible—getting them to their home stations as comfortably as possible.

So, there will be fewer sleeping car accommodations available to holiday travelers than in any previous Christmas season!

If you must travel over the holidays, please check with your railroad passenger agent regarding Pullman reservations now.

And, if you are unable to get the space you want, please remember that Pullman's war job is now bigger than ever.

Chicago Area Ski Enthusiasts Welcome Snow

BY JUDITH CASS

EAGERLY welcoming the snow and hoping for more, as well as for a bit milder weather, are the hordes of skiers in the Chicago area. The ski tows were running at Wilmot Wis., last week-end, and reports are that the skiing was fair. Members of the Snow Chase club expect to use the surrounding territory more this year with the end of gasoline rationing, which curbed neighborhood trips last winter.

The club, which recently elected John B. Carson president, has not planned a gathering until February, when it hopes that those members still away in service will be at home. Other officers are Stewart Boal, treasurer, and Lt. Everett L. Millard Jr., secretary. Lt. Millard is in Washington, D. C. Lt. Comdr. Philip von Ammon, Lt. Lawrence Denman, Lt. Comdr. Henry Meers, Hyde Gillette, and Lt. Charles D. Preston, all governors, still are away. The Gillettes are expected to return from Washington shortly. Comdr. Meers is in Washington, and Lt. Denman, when last heard from, was in Japan.

The Carsons and their 9 year old son, Sherman, are making plans for a skiing holiday at Alta, Utah, early in January. Mrs. Craig Colgate, also a governor of the club, and her husband, who is back with a discharge from overseas service, will go to the same resort later next month. They will return in time for Christmas to the Winnetka home of Mrs. Colgate's parents, the Ralph H. Hobarts, following their present visit in the east, during which they will see Mrs. Colgate's sister, Mrs. Benjamin A. Fairbank. The Fairbanks, who live in Cambridge, Mass., have a new little son, who has been named Hobart for his maternal grandfather.

David Stickney, another governor, is in charge of a new club program this winter, that of teaching children to ski. The classes will serve as a sort of nursery school so that parents may bring their youngsters along and be free to enjoy the skiing without watching out for the young ones.

Debutante News

Feminine friends of Mrs. Kenneth Farwell Burgess and young women who are contemporaries of her daughter Joan, have been invited to a debut tea for Miss Burgess from 3 to 6 p. m. today in her parents' home in Hubbard Woods. The bud and her mother will receive with Miss Burgess' sister, Mrs. James Edward Day, and Mrs. Burgess Jr. After the party the debutante and her assistants will go on to a dinner party which the Paul V. Harpers and the Alfred MacArthurs will give in the Blackstone hotel for debutante Ruth Sheldon Lee.

Added to the ever increasing list of debutante gatherings is the cocktail party Mr. and Mrs. Norman H. Ibsen will give for their niece, Miss Mari Bahe, in the Saddle and Cycle club Dec. 30 from 5 to 7 p. m. The Ibsens are expecting a visit some time during the holidays from Mr. Ibsen's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Oughton, who are here from the west coast. Mr. Oughton just has been released from the marine corps, in which he served as a captain. He and Mrs. Oughton will spend Christmas day with his mother, Mrs. James H. Oughton, in Dwight, Ill.

One date which Mrs. Paul Wilder has circled on her calendar for her visit here with her mother, Mrs. J. Ogden Armour, at Christmas time is the luncheon she will give Dec. 28 in the Racquet club for Miss Clair Curtis and Miss Janet Moore. Mr. and Mrs. Wilder and her daughter, Lolita Mitchell, will arrive from their home in Los Angeles this week. Her son, John J. Mitchell Jr., will come from the Hill school to join them.

Here and There

The Ralph H. Pooles' Lake Forest home is being gladdened by the arrival of the Pooles' sons, Lt. Richard G. Poole, who has just returned from a year in China, and Mr. Poole Jr., who has brought his two little girls, Marten Ann and Mary Forsyth, from Geneva, N. Y., for a few days' visit. Lt. Poole has been discharged from the navy and will live in Lake Forest. Mr. Poole Jr. and the little girls will rejoin the children's mother in Geneva in time for Christmas.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Carpenter and her mother, Mrs. William Ogden Green, will be in Kansas City to spend Christmas with the Carpenters' daughter, Mrs. Charles N.

1. To prepare dressing, simmer 1 cup dried apricots in 1 cup water for 5 minutes. Cut apricots into strips and mix with 6 cups dry bread cubes, ¼ cup melted butter, 1 teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, ½ cup chopped green pepper, and ½ cup chopped celery. Moisten lightly with 1 cup stock or apricot juice.

2. Rub inside of well scrubbed goose with 2 teaspoons salt. Place stuffing in neck and body cavities. Fasten neck skin to back with a skewer or rustproof safety pin, truss wings and legs to body with long skewers, and close body opening by lacing across skewers or by sewing with a large needle.

3. Tie legs together, fasten cord on underside, then lace across wing and leg skewers. Prick skin around legs and wings to let fat run out. Roast, breast side up, on rack in an uncovered pan at 325 degrees, allowing 20 to 25 minutes for each pound. Baste with apricot juice 20 minutes before done.

4. At intervals pour off fat. For a perfect gravy, use 3 tablespoons each of drippings and flour for each 2 cups of liquid. Blend the flour and fat thoroly, then add liquid and cook about 5 minutes over low heat, stirring constantly. Garnish platter with spiced canned apricots and curly endive. (Prepared by Mary Meade)

White Collar GIRL

BY RUTH MAC KAY

The Ageless Ones

Recently some one asked that remarkable octogenarian, Dr. Bertha Van Hoosen, the secret of her continuing vitality thruout her long, active career. She answered, "I never have done a day's work in my life. I have loved every hour of it, and it hasn't seemed work."

Nothing could express better the importance of finding the right task, enjoying it, and giving one's best to it. Blessed is she whose life is filled with effort so satisfying it never seems like work. Of such are the ageless ones of this earth.

Restaurant Cashiers

Hasn't the time come for some one to give the restaurant cashiers some recognition? Our jobs are tough no matter how cozy we may look in our glass shelters. Aside from collecting money from our customers, we must compute the sales tax separately on all checks, keep the checks in numerical order, note the beverages sold [and keep a separate total of these]; total breakfast, lunch, and dinner checks separately, at the same time selling cigarets, candy, and chewing gum, while watching for those who walk out without paying their checks. [Any shortages come out of the cashier's weekly check.]

We earn between $25 and $30 weekly, must dress well, listen to the grievances of the waitresses and the public, wait patiently until the last couple decides to go home, supply correct time to all customers at all hours, know the charges for long distance calls to River Forest or Peoria, check articles and packages, keep a record of lost and found articles, and ward off the wolves. For all of this we get little credit. How about a warm, friendly smile this Christmas time.

The scents are famous and widely beloved. Both are blends, but in one there is a recognizable and delightful note of lavender, which is always lovely either as a base or a top note. The little bottles, cut to resemble a crown, are exquisite. The box is $2.75 plus tax.

And then, if you've a good bit more money to spend, there is a haunting, languid perfume that comes in one of the most appropriate of bottles for this season, a slender little pillar of glass that resem-

More children have been adopted and more prospective parents added to waiting lists in 1945 than in any recent year, St. Vincent's orphanage and the Cradle society of Evanston disclosed yesterday. There also has been an increase in the number of children made dependent by abandonment, illegitimacy, and other results of unsettled times.

Two hundred sixty babies were adopted from St. Vincent's during the first 11 months of 1945 and last year 273 were adopted during 12 months. There is a waiting list of 200 childless couples who wish to adopt babies. Approximately 200 children were adopted from the Cradle, the largest number in recent years, Mrs. William B. Walrath, founder and director of the society, reported.

"The waiting list of couples wanting babies is so long we don't even count it," Mrs. Walrath explained. "It is good, however, to know that these unfortunate little babies will not be robbed of their birthright and that there are so many young American couples willing to be foster parents."

One thousand fifty children were entered in St. Vincent's home in the first 11 months of the year, a marked increase over the 745 babies admitted in the entire year of 1944.

There was a 10 per cent increase in the number of children brought into the home by the police. This was caused by more mothers being haled into court on charges of contributing to the delinquency or dependency of their children or of child abandonment, by children born in the County hospital who were not allowed by the health department to be taken into unsanitary homes, and by children who had no homes because their parents were temporarily stranded after an eviction notice.

Most of the children entered at St. Vincent's were boys, altho most couples wishing to adopt children want girls, Sister Mary Alice of the staff said.

The home has been crowded thruout the year, because of shortage of help and because babies stayed for longer periods than in previous years. There was a shortage of available boarding homes in which to place the children whose parents were declared unfit by the courts. The home is still seeking foster homes and would like to place many of its little charges immediately. Volunteers should contact Sister Melanie, mother superior and superintendent of the institution.

In 1945 also there was an increase in the number of unwed mothers cared for in the maternity hospital operated in conjunction with the infant home.

ON THE AISLE

By Claudia Cassidy

Olsen and Johnson Dig Thru Newsprint to Discover Busy Theater of Quarter Century Ago

Mellowed by the sentiment of the season, Olsen and Johnson recently set some of their myriad myrmidons searching the newspaper files to get evidence of their first engagement at the Shubert [where they now shiver the rafter timbers with "Laffing Room Only"] back in the days when it was the Majestic home of vaudeville. The result is page one of the theater section of THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE of Sept. 26, 1920, and don't look if you mind being strummed like a harp with nostalgia. For Percy Hammond was writing in the upper left hand corner of that page, which held a wealth of things to write about.

Olsen [misspelled Olson] and Johnson, "Two Likeable Lads Loaded with Laughs," occupied a nice line of Majestic type on a bill that saved more imposing blackface for Harry Watson Jr. and Valerie Bergere, but made you squint to discover the half line allotted to a fellow named Jack Benny. Frank McGlynn was playing "Abraham Lincoln" at the Blackstone, Leo Dietrichstein was at the Studebaker in "The Purple Mask," Nance O'Neil at the Central in "The Passion Flower," and Richard Bennett in "Beyond the Horizon" was about to oust "The Hole in the Wall" from the Princess. Ethel Barrymore and "Declassée" were waiting on the Powers' doorstep for Arthur Byron and Martha Hedman to finish with "Transplanting Jean," and the Colonial had George White's "Scandals" to replace "Apple Blossoms" with [not starring] John Charles Thomas, Wilda Bennett, Percival Knight, and Fred and Adele Astaire.

Al Jolson's "Sinbad" was nudging "The Passing Show" at the Garrick, "Aphrodite" was at the Auditorium, and the Cort had "Wedding Bells," with Margaret Lawrence and Wallace Eddinger, who knew their way about high comedy. "Buddies" was at the Woods with Donald Brian, Peggy Wood, and Ralph Morgan. "Honey Girl" played the Grand and "Adam and Eva" the La Salle. Sophie Tucker was at the Palace, and if you peered into small type you found Bert Lahr at the Star and Garter. Frank Libuse, now an Olsen and Johnson regular, was at Edelweiss Gardens. Vaudeville and burlesque flourished, and there were four local stock companies.

Music? The Chicago Symphony with Frederick Stock, of course. Caruso at Medinah temple, an Auditorium series with Farrar, Godowsky, Gabrilowitsch, Bauer, Kreisler, and Rachmaninoff; Sousa due at the Auditorium, and Orchestra hall billing Braslau, Lashanska, Merle Alcock, and Lambert Murphy, Moiseivitsch and Zimbalist. Kubelik was coming, and a Paderewski announcement turned out to be about player piano reproduction. Yvette Guilbert was announcing a theater school in New York. Movies? Just one on the whole page, so they must have spilled over. It was for "The Restless Sex," with Marion Davies.

Notes

According to New York, "You Touched Me" will take over the Harris Feb. 11. This is the Tennessee Williams-Donald Windham play with Edmund Gwenn and Montgomery Clift. . . . Marion Colby has replaced Diosa Costello in "Spring in Brazil." . . . Billy Rose has been granted permission to take "Carmen Jones" to England and may, next September. . . . It's still indefinite about "A Joy Forever" opening in New York. . . . The Ravinia festival announced no financial results of the 1945 season but refunded 60 per cent to guarantors. Sale of coupon books was up almost $10,000 to more than $59,000.

Chicago Starts Its Celebration of Christmas

BY RITA FITZPATRICK

The flurry of snow this week is appropriate accompaniment to the flurry of Christmas activities which are taking place all over the city. Shut-ins and orphans are being entertained at parties by various organizations. Carols can be heard thruout the loop. The Salvation Army is making plans to play Santa Claus in a bigger way this Christmas than at any time in 65 years. Chicago has begun celebrating.

Santa Claus paid a pre-Christmas visit to more than 100 clinic children of the Chicago Osteopathic hospital, 5200 Ellis av., yesterday. In his pack of toys there was a gift for every one. Following his visit, a puppet show was staged by the young people's group of the Church of Christ. Mrs. Everett Borton, president of the women's junior auxiliary of the hospital, was in charge of the program.

Chicago's Camp Fire Girls yesterday assembled their annual collection of Christmas gifts for shut-in heart patients, mostly children, in the offices of the Chicago Heart association, at 203 N. Wabash av. The gifts will be distributed by the association during the week.

The 10th annual tridium of Christmas carols by high school choruses was begun yesterday in the lobby of the Builders' building, 228 N. La Salle st. The program, which will be presented for three days, is under the direction of Dr. Helen Howe, director of music. The schools participating were Morgan Park High school and Roosevelt High school.

The choir of Chicago Teachers' college will present its annual Christmas program tomorrow in the school auditorium. International Christmas music will be emphasized under the direction of Miss Catherine Taheny.

Families of three and four generations will be honored at the annual Christmas party of the Kiwanis Club of Chicago tomorrow in the Bal Tabarin of the Hotel Sherman. A grab bag will be one of the yuletide features.

Approximately 125 children and their parents are expected to attend the Christmas party of Calumet council, Knights of Columbus, Sunday afternoon in the Southmoor hotel. The party has been an annual event for 25 years. James McKenzie of 6824 Calumet av., assistant lecturer, will be in charge.

The patients at Vaughan General hospital will be entertained today by the performers of the Empire room of the Palmer House. Featured on the program will be George Olsen and his orchestra and the Borrah Minnovitch Harmonica Rascals. The Christmas season will be made as festive as possible for the boys at Vaughan, Brig. Gen. P. J. Carroll, commanding general, explained yesterday. All patients able to go home for the holiday will be given passes from Friday to Thursday, Dec. 27.

More than 1,000,000 persons, including convalescent veterans, old people, and children in needy families will be remembered by the Salvation Army corps and units thruout the nation, Commissioner Donald M. McMillan, national secretary, announced yesterday. Christmas services will take the form of cash assistance, clothing, grocery orders, gifts, and Christmas baskets.

Looking at Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Dec. 18—Oscar Levant, here with his wife, daughters, maid, and nurse, says he's traveling with a ballet of women. He's proving a real joy at Warners, where he's putting the music for "Humoresque" on a mighty high plane. Asked by the producer if he could cut Brahms' "Concerto" from eight to two minutes for a sequence, Oscar replied, "Sure, I can do it. I can cut it all right, but I'll bet you'll be hearing from Brahms in the morning." The producer snaffled those lines right up and put them in the picture. . . . Speaking of "Humoresque," I asked Joan Crawford why John Garfield had decided to play in that film after he'd once nixed it. "O," she replied, "when he turned it down he didn't know I was going to be in it." Her separation and forthcoming divorce from Phil Terry doesn't surprise me. Some girls just can't take success—and after all these years, too. . . . After Mike Curtiz finishes "Life with Father" he'll do "The Life of Will Rogers." He'll also have—despite denials—his own independent unit on the Warner lot. . . . Teresa Wright goes into one of those husband-wife producing combinations. She'll make one picture for Hemisphere films, which is jointly headed by Teresa, Niven Busch, and Harry Sokolov. Niven will write her script.

House for Rent—But Don't Crowd

Rita Hayworth is stuck with the lease on that mammoth house until April, but she could run it as a boarding house now and make a terrific profit. There'll be plenty of room now that Orson's out. He had to have two levels himself. Rita had to have shooting suspended on her last picture several times due to lip infections caused by nerves. . . . Cary Grant hasn't decided whether he'll go to London and do a picture for Arthur Rank. I hope he'll say no. Incidentally, this should give you a laugh. Cary has fallen for one of our biggest stars, and everybody in the company knows it except the star. I have a feeling she suspects—but it'll get Cary nowhere. . . . The only thing that's holding up "Serenade," which will star Ann Sheridan, is a leading man. They ain't found one yet. . . . Milton Sperling has snagged Frits Lang from Walter Wanger to direct Gary Cooper in "Cloak and Dagger." I hear Coop's deal is monumental with a guarantee of $300,000, plus 10 per cent of the gross. Not bad for a Montana cowboy!

Mad's Spree; Other Party Notes

Mad Man Muntz's party for Joseph Frazer was the maddest ever. Pictures of Frazer's new car were passed out. It's a beauty if I ever saw one. Frazer was intrigued with Mrs. Sid Strotz, but was interrupted by so many introductions that he never was able to finish one pretty speech to her. Kay Kyser was there, spilling his plans for a Christmas party at Fort MacArthur and various hospitals. Arthur Unger was all over the place. Willard Parker, towering above my son, exhibited some feet. . . . But it was the Randy Scott's cocktail party the next night at Romanoff's that really had the town in a tizzy. Lew Ayres, looking better than ever, was seated by Ida Lupino, who had a black lace doily on the back of her head. The Hank Fondas were planning their soiree; Jack Benny was telling of Mary's illness. Howard Hughes wanted to know when I'd take off to Paris in one of his planes. Rocky Cooper, Mrs. Reggie Gardiner, Mrs. Jules Stein, and Anita Colby all could have taken prizes in a hat parade. Gail Patrick wound her head in a white turban and stuck a poinsettia atop it. . . . When I remarked to Jimmy Stewart on the nice story a weekly magazine carried about him, he said, "O, Hedda, you didn't fall for that, too?" . . . Our hostess, clad in white, could be spotted from one end of the room to the other. Harry Joe Brown was complaining that his sister, who was with him, got all the family beauty.

Jewish Women Plan Drive for Building Fund

Representatives from 200 Jewish women's organizations of Chicago and neighboring communities will meet at luncheon tomorrow in the Standard club to start a drive in conjunction with a 4 million dollar United Jewish Building fund campaign. The goal set for women's organizations is $750,000.

Institutions to benefit from the campaign, which is said to be the most ambitious ever undertaken by the Jewish community in Chicago, are Michael Reese and Mount Sinai hospitals, Winfield sanatorium, the Home for Aged Jews, the Orthodox Jewish Home for the Aged, the Jewish People's institute, and the Jewish Children's bureau. Money contributed will be expended for new building and modernization of existing facilities.

Chairman of the women's division organizations committee for the campaign is Mrs. Samuel E. Hokin. At present Mrs. Hokin is in California, and Mrs. Louis J. Cohn will take her place as acting chairman at the luncheon. Johnnie Neblett, radio story teller, will be presented in a dramatic sketch.

Vice chairmen on Mrs. Hokin's committee are Mrs. Benjamin H. Birnbaum, Mrs. Herbert M. Hauptman, Mrs. William B. Hork, Mrs. Harry J. Iverson, Mrs. Louis Savitt, and Mrs. Joseph L. Stone.

INSTALMENT XXXIX.

CONFESSION

Avis sat on the edge of her bed. Only she was being allowed up top, but she had strict orders not to stir from her own room till the inspector came to lead her downstairs for questioning. For her story was to head the list. Her brain reiterated its ceaseless fugue: "O, if only I hadn't rushed out!"

It had seemed the right thing to do. Yet, thanks to her action, the deed had been put forward, timed to be over and done with while she was out of the house. The woman who had schemed the "accident" must have opened this bedroom door and seen its occupant wasn't inside. This had been done because one cup of coffee in the drawing room had been left untasted. Drugged coffee—poured into the handiest receptacle before the dispersal for bed. Robin had yawned, here in this room. And Erica! Like the others, she had been heavily doped.

"And I, I gave Erica the very coffee that sent her off sound!"

Avis beat her anguished hands. At the moment she regarded her own self as solely responsible for Erica's death. Erica, if awake, would have cried out, roused Moravian anyhow, instead of which she had lain in her bed, prey for the savage blow aimed at her skull.

"I suppose if I had swallowed my coffee I wouldn't have heard a sound."

That had been the intention. Just luck one person had missed her dose of strong sedative; but it wasn't luck but cold reason—the inspector's—that had kept her by the Bracken fireside 10 minutes too long. Ten? Six minutes—four. She and Cam had heard the thin little body as it struck the pinetops out here.

Diabolically clever, the dog feature. Only a real fiend could have thought it up. Less astute the failure to dirty the crocheted slipper so carefully deposited on the outer ledge. The clean sweep of finger prints on the casement frame—that too was a blunder. Robin, quick to note the color and smell of the chrysanthemum water, had tried to get rid of the dope evidence and been foiled, and he'd risked another move with the gray house shoes.

What was this commotion on the floor beneath. Outside in a flash she craned over the bannisters, saw the doctor on the lower flight, and one of the Wyfforde constables as he shoved a pearl gleaming object into the inspector's hands.

"Which window?" the inspector barked. "When?"

"This first room on the right. Not three minutes ago. It's the automatic you wanted, I take it?"

"Mr. Grier," the Yard man grated, "this pistol has just been seen flying from your window. What have you to say?"

"Seen, was it?" Robin sneered. "Bullet tests will be made. I note that three cartridges are missing from the clip. It can soon be determined whether or not the shot fired at Dr. Bruce this evening and the one lodged in Agatha Trimble's skull came from——"

"O, cut the cackle! I pinched the gun, I fired the shots. Well, why don't you take me in charge?"

"Ill," Maud croaked. "Delirious. Inspector, you cannot credit——" She drew back into her doorway, a gray wraith as the inspector spoke again.

"One moment, Mr. Grier. You say you fired these three bullets. At whom? It is my duty to warn you that any statement you may see fit to make——"

"O, haven't I told you? I shot Trimble, shot her thru the head. She was a snake, she wanted killing. And Erica was another snake, bats as well, only I couldn't shoot her, I couldn't chance the row, so I finished her off in a quieter way. It seems my little roof act didn't come off. And now I've come a cropper getting rid of the gun."

"When did you shoot Miss Trimble? And where?"

"Don't be silly," he growled. "You know the answers. Just before dinner I tracked over to Elm Corners in the Ford. I'd caught her the evening before shoving some letter into the box, I'd threatened her and she'd sworn she'd clear off; only I didn't altogether trust her to keep her word. She believed I'd be watching her get aboard that 7 o'clock bus. Instead of which, when she faded out in the dark of Elm Corners, double-crossing, meaning to come back, I was waiting for her—with the gun. I let her get as far as the pond——"

Elm Corners! O, the poor blind fool!

Down in the study Robin faced the green shaded lamp. "Why did I cart her back? You try hiding a body in four feet of slime. O, I took her money and so on; I had to make it look like robbery of course. Then I thought of the tunnel back here. You must admit it was the perfect spot, so long as she wasn't missed and hunted for. That's when I got my real brainwave. Here was the pond, just what I wanted to make it seem the woman had done a deliberate bunk. I simply weighted her recognizable top garments and sank them in the water."

"She was carrying a suitcase. Where did you hide that?"

"Find it yourself."

"It will facilitate matters, Mr. Grier, if you will state the whereabouts of this bag."

"O, yeah?"

"Very well," said the inspector. "You refuse. Now about the three cartridges. Thus far you've accounted for one."

He was only guessing that the clip had been fully charged.

"That swine, Bruce," the young man muttered. "I hoped I'd pipped him. The hospital grounds were too blasted dark."

"How . . . O, just before dinner. Call it 7:45."

"I see. And with what object?"

"He was her doctor—and Erica's."

"Two bullets," checked the inspector inexorably. "And the third?"

"All right, at Elm Corners I misfired. I had a couple of goes at Trimble. The first went into the hedge."

The older man got up. "Kindly remain in your room, Mr. Grier. For the moment that will be all."

"Remain in . . . aren't you clapping me into a cell?"

"Not just yet," the inspector said.

Even Vigilant Mother Has Some Shocks

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

[Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

How important it is to be always on the alert if you have a baby old enough to creep or walk, or if your children are older but still young. You may remember my describing how "our" baby, who is 17 months old, got his cheek burned by an electric light bulb.

Being with this little boy as I am so much of the time, remembering his father's babyhood, and encountering sad news items so often in the papers, I cannot emphasize too much the need of being vigilant when you have small children. They can be quick as a flash and do the most unexpected things.

To go on and illustrate by other incidents in our family:

The painters have just finished doing the inside of the house and things are all out of their proper places. Sunday afternoon we were in the kitchen getting tea, with our cherub circulating around under our feet. Suddenly we heard a thud and a burst of crying.

Well, he virtually never cries when he has one of his many falls; so what was our horror when we picked him up to see the small tongs from the ice bucket pushed back in his mouth. Fortunately they are rounded and his mouth wasn't hurt. How did he get them? His elastic arms [as a friend of ours calls them] had stretched way up to the window-sill for them where we would have been sure they were out of reach, and then he had turned and tripped.

Two months ago he had the narrowest escape of all. We have a long sharp knife for kitchen carving which I, being the family knife sharpener, keep with a razor edge. When we put it down we put it far back on the kitchen table. Yet in one second, when the two young mothers right in the kitchen had their backs turned for just an instant, "our" baby had stood on tiptoe, stretched his arm to that knife, and grasped it. He simply seemed too short for the possibility to have entered our heads. You see, what they can't do one day, they can do the next.

Taking care of a little child is something like driving a car. It has to become second nature to you to be constantly alert. And you need eyes in the back of your head.

Rev. Goff to Speak at Yule Meeting of Rotary Women's Club

Mrs. Thomas Warren of Wolverton, England, wife of the president of Rotary International, will be a special guest of the Women of the Rotary Club of Chicago at a Christmas meeting this afternoon in the Hotel Sherman. The Rev. Charles Ray Goff, minister of the Chicago Methodist temple, will give a talk on "The Miracle of Christmas," and the nurses' sextet of Augustana hospital will sing carols. As one of their Christmas projects, the women this year are supplying baskets of fruit for patients in ward 51 of Vaughan General hospital.

Lounge Wear

If you're in the market for a long or short housecoat, consider the ones shown today. And if you like, you can have both. Style No. 3065, which is designed for sizes 12 to 44, can be used to make either version. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 35 inch material and 2⅝ yards of edging to make the brunch coat, or 4¾ yards of 39 inch material to make the longer model.

Order Clotilde patterns from Chicago Tribune, P. O. Box 537, Grand Central Annex, NEW YORK CITY. Print name and address; state size. Each pattern is 10 cents, plus 2 cents for mailing. The fall and winter fashion book, on sale at Tribune Public Service offices, is 15 cents; 12 cents if ordered by mail with a pattern.

Late Shoppers Find Supplies Thinning Out

BY REA SEEGER

Swarming shoppers are going down the last stretch. Outside the unbelievable supplies of scarves, they're finding everything pretty much picked-over. Nevertheless the more hardy souls trot blithely to town, hoping for a miracle.

One safe section is the handkerchiefs. Anything but modest in price, they make up for the high cost in beauty of materials and exquisite handwork. The present assortments of prints are surprisingly vivid and varied. Some black beauties, gaily printed in strawberries, are fetching reminders of spring. Stunning initialed handkerchiefs are priced at a king's ransome, but they're decorative.

Men's handkerchiefs are carefully guarded, not only because of limited supplies but also because of the price. Utterly plain affairs are shockingly high priced, but you have the satisfaction of knowing that every thread is all linen and when there is hand work, each stitch is worth the time taken.

Among the newly unpacked supplies of gift ideas are some evening gloves in lovely pastel colors such as shell-pink, turquoise-blue, lime, pale yellow, white, and some rosy raspberry tints. One exciting pair is of pale pink taffeta; another of fine doeskin has a triangular motif of braid work. Featherstitching is another effective contrast trim when the thread used is of subtle contrast colors. Lush all white gloves in fine doeskin and the more dress parade models in fine white kidskin are classic items, worthy of the most fastidious woman on your lists.

One of the best surprises that the junior John Colemans could have received is to have their son, Lt. [j. g.] Robert S. Coleman, home for Christmas. Lt. Coleman, who has served aboard the Belleau Wood for almost two years, arrived on the west coast last week and hopes to arrive in Lake Forest on a 30 day leave in time for the holidays.

Another returned warrior is Lt. Comdr. Arthur S. Littlefield Jr., who brought his wife with him from the west coast to spend the holidays with his parents in Winnetka. Comdr. Littlefield is on terminal leave after five years in the navy. Mrs. Littlefield has been living with her parents in Wichita, Kas., while he was away. Capt. and Mrs. Paul C. L'Amoreaux [Kay Littlefield] will spend Christmas in Baltimore, Md., where he is stationed with the army. Capt. L'Amoreaux will be discharged after the first of the year.

Miss Elizabeth Faulkner, who established the school and serves as its principal, will celebrate her 80th birthday Friday. The Christmas tree in the Bateman school will be decorated today by the children with ornaments they have made.

Inquiring Camera Girl

By Maryon Zylstra

[The Tribune will pay $5 for each interesting question submitted by a reader and used by The Tribune. Today's question was submitted by Mrs. Harry Westerhouse, Holmen, Wis.]

THE QUESTION

What interesting experiences have you had as a volunteer worker in the service men's center?

WHERE ASKED

THE ANSWERS

Mrs. L. L. Bennett, 2148 Giddings—A corporal asked me if I would sew the new stripe on his blouse. After I finished, he said, "Are you going to be here all day? I have another blouse." He returned in half an hour with seven blouses. Later I got all the shirts back for another stripe when he was promoted to sergeant.

Mrs. Marguerite Walker, 1524 S. Prospect av., Park Ridge—I have a son in the navy who is 19. I just love to come down to the service center and talk to all the young boys. That way I feel closer to my son and am able to keep up with him even tho he's gone. I enjoy every bit of the time I spend in the center.

Mrs. W. T. Walker, 128 N. Garfield st., Hinsdale—A sailor who had come directly to Chicago from his ship asked for a glass of fresh milk. I handed it to him and he said, "How much do I owe you?" "Not a penny," I replied. "It's free." "Well, then, give me six more glasses!" The sailor drank seven glasses of milk in a row.

Mrs. Lilly Koenig, 5355 Sheridan rd.—This was back in the early part of the war. A rosy cheeked boy told me he was going on a long trip. I fixed him a lunch that would last him three days. About a year and a half later he came back. He was limping and he'd lost the color in his cheeks and looked 10 years older.

Mrs. Florence Heaslip, 1033 Loyola av.—One of the boys asked to use a pair of scissors for an hour. I asked him what he wanted them for and he said he was going to cut his toenails. I sent him to the first aid room to have the nails taken care of, but the nurse said she was not a pedicurist. He felt insulted and left.

Mrs. Stephen Love, 5355 Sheridan rd.—One time last July I talked to one of the boys. Later he brought his young wife up to the center to meet me. That was just one example of how much these boys appreciate little favors when they are away from their families and their friends and in a strange city.

Protestant Women Will Give Yule Fete for Children Today

Climax of the year for the Protestant Woman's Service club and the dependent children in its charge is an annual Christmas party, a gala occasion drawing Santa Claus to the scene with a bulging pack of toys and useful gifts. This is the silver anniversary year of the club and, accordingly, the holiday celebration, which is to take place at noon today in the Wedgwood room at Marshall Field & Co., will be an especially festive party.

All of the youngsters befriended by the club are in foster homes, and the foster mothers of the smaller tots also will come as guests. There will be a turkey feast, a giant Christmas tree, special entertainment, and community singing. Among the hostesses will be Miss Ima Clarke, founder and first president of the service organization, who has not missed one of the Christmas parties. Mrs. E. O. Weedfall, currently the president, and Mrs. Charles D. Mackenzie, welfare chairman, planned the day.

It is estimated that the club has taken charge of 600 children in its 25 years of service.

Household Forum

By Louise Bargelt

Helen K., Detroit, Mich.—I have found it is wise, when doing any interior painting around the house, to keep plenty of air circulating. The air should also be warm and dry for best results.

Mrs. G. S., Chicago—When I have accumulated a substantial amount of bacon grease, I cook it with a sliced potato in it. When the potato slices are crispy, I strain the grease thru a cloth, and it stays fresh a long time.

Jane B., Lincoln, Neb.—If you use a chopping bowl, you'll find it is a big help to set it in a shallow pan. In this way you can move it about as you "chop" and yet it maintains a fairly solid position.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 spade	Pass	1 no trump	Double
3 spades	Pass	Pass	3 no trump
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening leads from certain card combinations are commonly regarded as taboo. Leads from a king are generally frowned upon. Leads from an ace-queen against a suit contract are looked upon as the mark of the uninitiated. It must be borne in mind, however, that these bans are intended to apply only to the case of the opening lead, which is being made in the dark and before information has been obtained from the appearance of the dummy. While the use of the word "never" should be avoided on the question of making these leads, nevertheless it must be conceded that openings of that type on the whole are unprofitable.

But the appearance of the dummy and developments of the play will frequently call for a change of policy and new leads from aces and kings may not only become permissible, but be absolutely obligatory.

We have many times observed that when there is only one suit remaining which offers any hope to defeat the contract, reliance should be placed upon that suit and not upon any slogans. A splendid illustration is provided by today's hand.

South's action in doubling is the proper procedure. Doubles of one no trump are intended for penalties and partner is asked to leave the double in unless his hand is completely unsuited to no trump defense. South made a gambling bid of three no trump, expecting to get a spade lead and hoping to pick up the ninth trick in partner's hand.

West led the jack of spades which declarer won with the queen and immediately led back a heart. West played the 10 to insure himself two heart tricks. When the king held, declarer offered not to delay the game any further and exposed nine tricks. South's strategy was very good. Had he chosen to run off his clubs first the whole picture would have been clear to the opposition and he would never have been able to steal the king of hearts. But West erred. The bidding plainly indicated that South's enthusiasm must be based upon a long and solid club suit. Otherwise where would be the values for his double and his single handed bid of three no trump? If declarer has six clubs and the two spades that he is known to hold, the king of hearts will be the ninth trick. The only hope therefore is the diamond suit. West should have "grabbed" the heart and shifted to the ace and queen of diamonds. East's no trump response could have been based on the king of diamonds and the queen of hearts. It was!

ILLINOIS WINS OVER DRAKE'S QUINTET, 64-42

Indiana Rally Whips Cincinnati, 54-44

Champaign, Ill., Dec. 18 [Special]—Bob Doster, Illinois forward, scored 20 points tonight to lead the Illini quintet in a 64 to 42 victory over Drake. It was the fifth nonconference triumph for the Illini in seven games.

Coach Doug Mills, preparing his team for a road trip to Lincoln, Neb., Thursday night and Iowa City Saturday, used a total of 17 players in the game.

The Illini held a 32 to 17 half time lead due mainly to the efforts of Wally Mroz, Chicago sophomore, starting for the first time. Mroz scored eight points and Doster garnered 10 in the first half.

Leading scorer for the Blue Devils was Donald Siefken, freshman from Morrison, Ill., who made 10 points. Drake's 6 foot 8 inch center, John Pritchard, scored eight. Lineup:

INDIANA WINS, 54 to 44.

Bloomington, Ind., Dec. 18 [Special]—Indiana had to come from behind tonight to win its fifth consecutive basketball game of the season, 54 to 44, over the University of Cincinnati. It was the last nonconference game for the Hoosiers before starting the Big Ten season at Michigan Saturday.

Indiana had a 9 to 1 lead early in the game, but Cincinnati went ahead, 14 to 13, after 8 minutes had elapsed and held a 27 to 26 halftime advantage. A sudden basket barrage by Hoosiers Tom Schwartz and Capt. Dick Wittenbraker after the intermission put Indiana into a 12 point lead and brought victory. Wittenbraker won scoring honors with 13 points, while Schwartz made 11. Lineups:

LEONARD QUITS AS PITTSBURGH STEELERS' COACH

Mullica Hill, N. J., Dec. 18 (AP)—Jim Leonard, coach of the Pittsburgh Steelers of the National Football league, said tonight he had resigned as coach after serving out a one year contract.

He said he plans to continue coaching, but does not wish to announce his plans as yet and refused to say whether they concern the All-America conference.

Leonard said reports that Dr. Jock Sutherland, former University of Pittsburgh and Brooklyn Dodgers coach, would succeed him probably were true. Lud Wray, his only assistant, also resigned, Leonard said.

SAYS CONTRACT EXPIRED

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 18 (AP)—Art Rooney, co-owner of the Pittsburgh Steelers professional football team, said tonight he was at a loss to understand the reported resignation of Jim Leonard as coach of the Steelers.

"Leonard's contract expired with the Steelers' last game, in Washington, Dec. 2," Rooney said. "When he agreed to terms at the last draft meeting I explained to him in the presence of Walt Kiesling, our former coach, that he was to be here for one year only."

Browns' McQuillen, Out of Navy, to Report in Spring

8 p. m.—Weber vs. St. Mary of Perpetual Help.

Mount Carmel, early favorite to win the 12th annual St. George preseason high school basketball tournament, will make its first start of the meet tonight when it plays Lewis school in the last game of the second day's program.

Four games are scheduled tonight in contrast to last evening's five game card, which was featured by St. Gregory's 37 to 31 upset victory over St. Mel and St. Rita's thrilling 23 to 22 triumph over St. Clement.

At 7 o'clock this evening Joliet Catholic meets Loyola. St. Mary of Perpetual Help opposes Weber at 8 o'clock, with Fenwick and St. Philip clashing at 9 o'clock.

De La Salle Wins, 45-34

Jack Connor and Regis Lisowski paced De La Salle to a 45 to 34 triumph over Holy Trinity as they combined to score 24 points in last night's opener. De La Salle gained an 11 to 5 lead at the end of the first quarter and was never headed. Connor scored 13 points and Lisowski followed closely with 11.

St. Mel held a one point lead over St. Gregory, 14 to 13, at half time, but by the end of the third period the St. Gregory five had forged ahead, 21 to 20. The Cadets came back with three baskets and a free throw to take a 27 to 21 lead, but Bert Anton and Gene Dolan started a rally that tied the score at 31-all.

With less than two minutes remaining Dolan and Bill Gleason accounted for three more field goals to clinch the victory for St. Gregory.

Sinks Winning Point

Ted Krueger's free throw in the last 10 seconds of play broke a 22-all deadlock and gave St. Rita its triumph over St. Clement.

A tournament scoring record was established as St. Ignatius routed St. Constance, 81 to 14. This bettered the old mark of 74 points, set by Mount Carmel in 1943.

Roy McHugh tallied 15 points as the host school, St. George, defeated St. Michael, 49 to 29, in the evening's final game. St. George led, 25 to 16, at the half.

PLUMMER, LEE RETAIN TITLES IN C. Y. O. BOUTS

6,000 Cheer Finals of Annual Meet

BY FRANK MASTRO

Sixteen champions—eight each in the open and novice classes—were crowned last night in the 15th Catholic Youth Organization tournament finals before a cheering crowd of 6,000, which included 1,000 service men guests, in the Coliseum.

Two defending titleholders were among the winners. These were Abe Lee and Joe Plummer, students at the Lewis School of Aeronautics.

112 POUNDS—Roy Palmanter, St. Augustine.
118 POUNDS—Harry Scorzo, St. Mary Incornata.
135 POUNDS—Ernest Mosley, St. Anselm.
HEAVYWEIGHT—John Polcyn, St. Columbkille.

First open division titleholder was Palmanter, who scored a close victory over Milton Dockins, capable fighter from St. Ann's at 55th st. and Wentworth av., for the flyweight title.

Scorzo Beats McBurnie

Scorzo was awarded a surprise decision over Jack [Scotty] McBurnie, navy hero of invasions of Palau, Okinawa, and the Philippines, in a roughhouse battle for the open 118 pound title. McBurnie scored effectively with straight rights to the jaw in every round, which forced Harry to hold at times.

Plummer became the first defending champion to retain his title when he was given a disputed verdict over Pvt. Yoshito Yoshino of Fort Sheridan for the featherweight crown. Yoshino, who was substituted for Johnny Mezzano when the latter reported ill, floored Plummer for no count with a right to the jaw in the first round and then landed a barrage of rights and lefts to the face for the remainder of the period which had Plummer bewildered. Joe's rally in the next two rounds, especially his fine work in the third, caught the eyes of the officials.

Mosley Whips Diaz

Mosley defeated Pete Diaz, St. Francis Assisi in the lightweight open final. Lee, National A. A. U. welterweight ruler, then successfully defended his C. Y. O. 147 pound championship by scoring the fastest knockout on the program over Don Lonergan, St. Matthew. Abe connected with a left to the jaw, shortly after the first round started which sent Lonergan flying to the canvas for a nine count. After regaining his feet, Don, this year's novice Golden Gloves lightweight victor, caught a right to the body which dropped him to the floor for the second time and caused Referee Tommy Gilmore to stop it after only one minute and 21 seconds.

St. Elizabeth High school scored 18 points to win the team championship trophy.

During brief ceremonies at the intermission, the Rev. Peter D. Meegan, secretary to the Most Rev. Bernard Sheil, auxiliary bishop of Chicago and founder and director of the C. Y. O., read a cable sent by Bishop Sheil, expressing his regret in being forced to miss the tournament finals for the first time since inception of the meet 15 years ago. Bishop Sheil is in Berlin as a representative of President Truman to survey political and religious conditions in Europe.

KOLLOWAY AND KENNEDY TO BE SOX AGAIN IN '46

BY IRVING VAUGHAN

Santa Claus dropped in at Comiskey park yesterday for a pre-Christmas chat with Leslie O'Connor, the new vice president, and hinted that it wouldn't be long before the White Sox had not only their pre-war third baseman but their second baseman of the same period.

Marine Lt. Bob Kennedy, a Chicagoan, already is back home from his war travels and, after the customary separation center ceremonies at Great Lakes early next month, will become available for whatever work Jim Dykes may want to have done around third base.

And Second Baseman Don Kolloway, altho in Germany, has forwarded word to teammate Orval Grove he expects to be turned loose by Uncle Sam within the next two months.

These Boys Will Help

Kennedy entered naval aviation in October 1942, later transferring to the marine corps. Kolloway, also a Chicagoan, went into the army in July of 1943, eventually having a hand in the European campaign.

Given both Kennedy and Kolloway the Sox will be able to send a complete vet infield into action next season, with Chet Hajduk, a first baseman who operated with the Great Lakes team, and the perennial Luke Appling, late of the army, at short. Dykes also can use, if he wishes, an all-vet outfield made up of Ralph Hodgin, Thurman Tucker and Taft Wright.

Both Kennedy and Kolloway were thought to be just short of their playing peak when they entered service and, as age is in their favor, it is figured neither will experience trouble picking up where he left off. Kolloway is 27; Kennedy, 25.

Cubs Sign a Scout

The Cubs' public relations department announced yesterday that the club had signed Tony Lucadello, former Chicagoan now of Fostoria, O., as a full time scout. He will have the ivory rights in Ohio. He is a brother of Johnny, infielder with the Browns.

JOHN SABO MADE FIELD DIRECTOR FOR ILLINI GROUP

John Sabo, former University of Illinois football and basketball star, has been named director of field activities for the Illinois Alumni association, Victor Cullin of Chicago, president of the organization, said yesterday. He succeeds Walt Wessman, director since 1942, who has resigned, effective Jan. 1, to go into the athletic goods business in Oak Park.

Sabo was graduated from the university in 1922 after an athletic career which saw him win All-Western conference honors as a half back. He recently was released by the navy with the rank of commander after serving since 1942.

NO COMMENT ON CHANGE IN SETUP OF SERVICE GAME

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18 (AP)—The navy department had no comment today on a report that John L. Sullivan, assistant secretary for air, was looking into the possibility of abrogating a contract calling for the Army-Navy football game to be played in Philadelphia the next three years.

Secretary of War Patterson said recently he favors the annual service game being held in various parts of the country. Chicago would like to entertain the 1946 contest.

Hawks Await Montreal; Tie for 1st Looms

BY EDWARD BURNS

The very saucy Montreal Canadiens, who lost only five of their 50 games the season before last and the same number last season, will face the eager Blackhawks tonight in Chicago Stadium. If the Hawks win, as the recent form sheets promise, they will effect a first place tie with the lads from Montreal.

The Canadiens will come to town with a record of having won only one of their last four games and they still are suffering from shock of a 5 to 1 jolting the Hawks accorded them the last time they were in Chicago. With 32 games remaining on their schedule, the Canadiens have lost six games, or more than they lost in each of their last two entire seasons.

Expect Big Turnout

The game tonight will be the third midweek contest of the season, including one played on Thanksgiving. Advance ticket sales have indicated, however, that the turnout tonight will approach the Sunday night surges.

The season opener, played with the New York Rangers on Wednesday night, Oct. 31, drew 19,052, second largest hockey crowd on record. The Thanksgiving turnout was 13,983, only crowd under 17,500 until the zero wave kept all but 16,571 away last Sunday night. The season total in Chicago has been 158,845, an average of 17,650 a game, and about the total expected at tonight's affair.

Hawks Menace Records

The Hawks, who have a fine chance to smash several individual and other scoring records this season, have won their last three games by heavy counts—8 to 3 over the Boston Bruins, 7 to 3 over the Rangers, and 6 to 4 over the Detroit Red Wings. Just before they suffered their last two losses early this month they accomplished an 8 to 2 victory in Toronto over the Maple Leafs.

Despite the fact the Hawks have been more effective on the road than in any season of recent memory, Manager Johnny Gottselig has been exhorting his lads to grab the game tonight and the one Sunday night with Detroit for insurance purposes. Thereafter the Hawks will play eight road games interrupted only by the game with Toronto in the Stadium on New Year's night. Sonja Henie will be in charge of the Stadium ice from Christmas night thru Jan. 17, with the New Year's exception, hence the long absence of the Hawks.

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 18 (AP)—Frank Sinkwich, one of Georgia's greatest football stars and the National Football league's most valuable player in 1944, says he has reached the end of the gridiron trail.

Discussing his future plans today in an interview with the Atlanta Journal, the former Georgia star said a recent knee injury prompted his decision to devote all his time to operating the cafe he owns in Youngstown, O. Sinkwich recently was discharged from the army.

MADE GENERAL MANAGER; WILL CHOOSE COACH

Wins Fame with His St. Mary's Teams

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 18 [Special]—Edward P. [Slip] Madigan, whose coaching skill and colorful personality have figured prominently in college football for a quarter of a century, has been engaged as general manager of the Los Angeles team in the All-America conference. This announcement was made today by Don Ameche, president of the Los Angeles club in the newly organized professional league, which will begin play next fall.

Madigan is best known for his long and conspicuously successful career as coach at St. Mary's college. Starting with little in the way of material, he built this team up to one of the most powerful and popular in the country. Not only up and down the Pacific coast, but in the east and middle west as well, St. Mary's Gaels drew large attendance wherever they played.

Will Name Coach Soon

Madigan will not coach the Los Angeles team. His first job as general manager will be to pick a coach from the half dozen applicants for the position. He expects to have one signed before the next meeting of the All-America conference in Chicago, Jan. 4, 5, and 6.

The Los Angeles team, which will play its home games in Gilmore stadium until the Coliseum is made available to professional football, is owned by a corporation that includes, in addition to Ameche, Bing Crosby, Pat O'Brien, Bob Hope, L. B. Mayer, Leo Spitz, and Norman Church, all of Los Angeles, and Benjamin F. Lindheimer and Daniel Rice of Chicago.

Madigan began his football career as a player at Notre Dame. He left the university to go into service in World War I., but returned subsequently to play on Knute Rockne's undefeated 1919 team. George Gipp, Eddie Anderson, Roger Kiley, Buck Shaw, Clipper Smith, Hunk Anderson, Norman Barry, John Mohardt, and others who rank among Notre Dame's greatest players were members of that squad.

Serves on All-Star Staff

After he was graduated from Notre Dame, Madigan took up coaching. His career in this line soon became identified with the fortunes of the St. Mary's teams, which he directed for approximately 20 years.

He served twice on the coaching staff of the Chicago All-Star football squad. In 1943 and 1944 he coached the University of Iowa eleven, temporarily replacing Dr. Edward Anderson, who was in the army medical corps.

Since leaving Iowa, Madigan has been an executive in the Smaller War Plants corporation, with headquarters in San Francisco. He is resigning from this position to take over his new duties with the Los Angeles club. His home is in Oakland.

"We are getting a late start in recruiting talent," Madigan said today, "but I'll guarantee that we'll have a club that will give Los Angeles the best in professional football before the first game of the 1946 season rolls around."

BROWNS GET DANIELL

Jim Daniell

Cleveland, O., Dec. 18 [Special]—Jim Daniell, All-America tackle at Ohio State university in 1941 under Coach Paul Brown, will play next season for the Cleveland Browns in the All-America conference. He will be reunited with Brown, who will be general manager and coach of the conference eleven. The announcement was made by Arthur McBride, owner of the Browns.

Daniell, veteran of combat action in the South Pacific with the navy, joined the Chicago Bears in the middle of the 1945 season. He was one of the new players responsible

Rams' Top Guard Considers Offer from Browns

Cleveland, O., Dec. 18 (AP)—Riley Matheson, all-league guard with the Cleveland Rams, National Football league champions, said today he is considering going into the coaching field or playing in the All-America conference next season, possibly with the Cleveland Browns. He has another year to serve on a two year agreement, but said he would not play for the Rams next season for the salary called for in the contract.

Matheson disclosed he was paid $375 per game this season, plus a bonus of $25 a game for expenses.

John Brickles, acting manager of the Browns, said he had talked with Matheson, adding reports of Riley's dissatisfaction had become known to several members of the All-America conference. Brickles said the Browns made Matheson "a nice offer," but declined to name the figure.

LA GRANGE LOSES TO MAINE, 8-6, IN STALLING GAME

Winners Get 5 Points in Last 3 Minutes

Maine High school handed La Grange its first basketball defeat in three games in the West Suburban league last night at La Grange, 8 to 6, in a stalling game.

La Grange took a 4 to 2 lead in the first quarter. Both went scoreless in the second period, and each managed to score a free throw in the third quarter to give La Grange a 5 to 3 margin. In the final period Dave Webber came thru with a free throw for the final La Grange point, and George Paynich put Maine in front in the last three minutes of play with two baskets, to which Corky Trantin added a free throw.

McCracken Is Back; He'll Be Coach in 1946

Bloomington, Ind., Dec. 18 [Special]—Branch McCracken will return to Indiana university as head basketball coach, it was announced today by Athletic Director Z. G. Clevenger. McCracken, just out of the navy with the rank of lieutenant, will take over as head coach and instructor in physical education for men with the start of the spring semester in February, Clevenger said.

Harry C. Good, who replaced McCracken as the basketball coach in 1943, will remain for the rest of this season, Clevenger added.

CEMETERY CODE DENOUNCED BY REP. GRANATA

Association Seeks More Power, He Charges

The Cemetery Association of Chicago is not only fighting efforts to regulate the financial practices of some of its members but is making an effort to get greater grants of power from a legislative commission, Rep. Granata [R., Chicago] charged yesterday.

"The private cemetery interests have submitted a proposed code that does everything possible to increase their profits, but doesn't bother about increasing protection for the bereaved person who buys a burial plot," said Granata, a member of the commission.

Police Power Sought

"This code would give cemetery associations the right of eminent domain, enabling them to condemn land for bigger cemeteries. This looks like pure speculation because other provisions would permit them to sell the land at any time.

"The cemeteries want power to hire special policemen who would have police power in the adjoining streets and highways. If we wait long enough they might submit amendments to create private justice of the peace courts.

"Nothing has been overlooked that might bring in more money. The cemetery corporations hope that their private agencies might be used for the burial of the soldier and sailor dead of World War II. and this code would authorize them to obtain federal grants for any purpose."

Barrett Analyzes Code

Atty. Gen. Barrett said the private cemeteries are disregarding constitutional requirements in their effort to win the right of eminent domain, which the Supreme court has been careful to restrict to governmental bodies. A detailed analysis of the proposed code has been started by Barrett, who last spring said a "multimillion dollar cemetery racket" exists in Illinois.

The cemetery association took a leading part in preventing legislative enactment of a code prepared by Barrett to protect perpetual care funds.

The association's cemetery code was distributed over the name of C. H. Bass of Kankakee, secretary of the Grand Mound Cemetery association and a member of the legislation commission. Granata said it presumably had been drafted by another commissioner, Atty. Leonard L. Cowan of Chicago, president of Cedar Park cemetery.

Commission to Meet Soon

The commission is scheduled to meet in Bloomington, probably in January, subject to the call of its chairman, Rep. Caton [R., Stanford].

The code submitted by Bass contained no provisions to penalize cemetery operators who mishandle funds or fail to live up to perpetual care agreements. Bass explained that omission by saying the commission could write in a penalty section at some future meeting.

KELLY SUGGESTS 22D ST. SITE FOR RAIL TERMINAL

Mayor Kelly suggested yesterday that a new Cermak rd. [old 22d st.] railway passenger terminal might be built in the vicinity of Clark st., Archer av., and Cermak rd., which is two miles from the center of the downtown district.

Congestion at the south side of the loop would be relieved, the mayor told newsmen, if the Dearborn, La Salle st., and Grand Central stations were abandoned and their railroad tenants joined in erecting a new terminal. He suggested that the Illinois Central railroad keep its main passenger facilities at 12th st., but erect a modern building.

Mayor Surprises Civic Leaders

The mayor's preference for a Cermak rd. station was a surprise to civic leaders, who had noted that the northward movement of the central business district had been a major factor in recent proposals that all the 16 railroads using south side stations should consolidate in a lake front station at Randolph st., north of Grant park.

The heart of the business district now extends from the vicinity of Jackson blvd. to Oak st., in the opinion of real estate men, who said that a Randolph st. terminal would lead to ready solution of traffic problems.

Railroad Removal Halted

The mayor indicated that he may discourage immediate action on an ordinance, backed by the council committee on railroad terminals, to force the Chicago and Western Indiana railroad to remove tracks crossing Plymouth ct. at Taylor st. and connecting the aged Dearborn station with its mail and express annex. Under emergency conditions it might be advisable to leave the tracks there for the present, he said.

The passenger terminal question is being studied by Joshua d'Esposito, engineer representing the mayor, and by committees of railroad men headed by President F. G. Gurley of the Santa Fe. In the last dozen years some studies have been made of a Roosevelt rd. [old 12th st.] terminal site, which would be a mile north of 22d st., but most plans have favored the Randolph st. lake front proposal.

K. G. SMITH WILL DIVIDES ESTATE OF ONE MILLION

The will of Kenneth G. Smith of Winnetka, 53, former head of the Pepsodent company, which disposes of an estate of approximately 1 million dollars, was filed yesterday in Probate court.

A bequest of $50,000 was made to the University of Chicago to establish Kenneth G. Smith fellowships, and $5,000 was left to the Hadley Correspondence School for the Blind.

The will provides that $750,000 from the residue be added to a trust established in 1932, the income of which is to go to the widow, Cora, and to be transferred to two sisters, Mrs. Florence Gifford Ellis and Mrs. June Keith Slater, upon Mrs. Smith's death. A separate trust of $100,000 each was set up for the sisters.

Among other bequests was one for $25,000 to Mrs. Price Harrah of 1540 Lake Shore dr., described as Mr. Smith's third cousin. Mrs. Harrah recently recovered a case containing $100,000 in jewels that she lost in a Kansas City, Mo., taxicab while en route to Mexico City.

CATTLE FEEDER GROUPS OF FOUR STATES TO UNITE

The Illinois Cattle Feeders' association, organized by Illinois farmers Nov. 1 in Springfield, soon will become united with similar groups in other middle western states.

Mark Pickell, 176 W. Adams st., executive vice president of the Illinois group, said yesterday that farmers from Illinois, Nebraska, Missouri, and Iowa will meet next month to organize a corn belt feeders' association.

The aim of the cattle feeders' organization is to combat federal subsidy and price ceiling policies detrimental to stable feeding practices. The Illinois group has urged immediate removal of ceilings on processed meats and then removal of subsidies to packers. It also has recommended that subsidies paid to feeders of cattle and lambs be eliminated next June 30.

ONLY PRICE HIKE GOES TO FORMER WPB AID'S FIRM

OPA Fails to Act on Other Paper Mills' Plea

With other paper mills cutting down their production of high grade wrapping paper because of office of price administration ceilings, a Minneapolis company headed by a former vice chairman of the war production board has obtained the only price adjustment granted by the OPA to coarse paper manufacturers, it was disclosed yesterday.

Minnesota and Ontario Paper company received its price increase from Chester Bowles, OPA administrator, on Nov. 9. The company is headed by Donald D. Davis, who resigned Oct. 1, 1944, as WPB vice chairman.

Operators of other paper companies asserted that they had petitioned the OPA for price adjustments time after time without action. The OPA insisted the adjustment granted the Minneapolis company resulted from the first official application made under a provision in effect since Dec. 2, 1944.

Made on Grounds of Need

Davis' company was permitted increases ranging from 10 cents to 50 cents a hundred pounds on four types of super-standard unbleached kraft wrapping paper on the grounds the company's former prices created a hardship and that continuation of production of the paper was essential to the national economy.

One of the largest manufacturers of super-standard wrapping paper said United States production had decreased from 2,778,000 tons in 1941 to 2,559,000 tons in 1945 and warned that it would continue to decrease because of OPA's failure to permit general price increases.

"The OPA has been sitting like a toad in the road, obstinately refusing to advance the ceiling prices and as a result all the mills are shifting to production of finer grade papers in order to make any money," he said.

Warns of Market Loss

He warned that OPA price policies will result in smaller supplies of wrapping paper in retail stores until imports from Canadian mills take up the slack. The result will be that Canadian mills will be selling wrapping paper in a market that rightly belongs to United States companies, he said.

One mill that has been making super-standard wrapping paper for 30 years said it had quit production of this line because of OPA policies. With the exception of Davis' company, ceiling prices are fixed on the basis of the mills' prices from Oct. 1 to 15, 1941.

Another result of OPA policies is that mills will not expand their operations because of their inability to make money, particularly the mills producing coarse paper, it was said. Wrapping paper is divided into three classifications: Standard kraft, No. 1 kraft, and super-standard kraft.

1945 CROP TOTAL THIRD LARGEST; SOME PEAKS SET

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18 (AP)—The 1945 food crop was the third largest on record, surpassed only by the peak harvest of 1942 and the crop of 1944. The department of agriculture in its final report of the year said today the average of production fell 1.5 per cent below last year and 2 per cent below 1942.

New production records were established for several important commodities including wheat, oats, tobacco, rice, popcorn, hops, peaches, grapefruit, almonds, and truck crops.

Near record crops included hay, soybeans, flaxseed, potatoes, sugar cane, oranges, grapes, and pecans. Larger than average crops were reported for corn, peanuts, sorghum grain, dry peas, grass, and legume seed crops.

GAINS TAX UNCHANGED

We would like to know if the new revenue act changes the individual capital gains in taxes in 1946.

O. K.

Neither the holding period nor the special alternative capital gains tax is changed. Thus short term gains and losses on capital assets held six months or less are fully taken into account. As before, only 50 per cent of long term gains and losses—those realized on assets held longer than six months—are considered.

There is no change in the limitation which provides that capital losses may be deducted in the taxable year only to the extent of aggregate capital gains, plus up to $1,000 of other income; nor in the carry-over of net capital losses to succeeding years.

Thru the cut of 3 percentage points in the surtax rates and the special deduction of 5 per cent in both normal tax and surtax, the tax on capital gains in 1946 and later years is lowered to the same extent as on other income, if net long term gains are included with such income.

Under the alternative method such gains can be listed separately and, if so, are taxed at a maximum rate of 50 per cent of half the gain [equivalent to 25 per cent of the actual gain]. Under the law applicable to 1945 it is of advantage to the taxpayer to use the alternative method only if his surtax net income exceeds $16,000. Under the new law it will be of advantage only if the surtax net income exceeds $18,000, for that is the lowest bracket in which combined net effective normal tax and surtax rates exceed 50 per cent.

INDUSTRY RIPS HOUSING PLANS AS UNREALISTIC

'Shoved Around' by U. S. at Parley

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18 (AP)—Construction industry leaders today assailed the government's new housing program as "unworkable" and "unrealistic" after adjournment of a two day government sponsored housing conference. Federal officials had said the sessions accomplished their purpose.

H. R. Northup, secretary-manager of the National Retail Lumber Dealers' association, told a news conference the management delegates "didn't come here to get shoved around for two days. We would like the idea of a conference if the government people had not made up their minds before it was called on just what was going to be done."

Douglas Whitlock, former president of the Producers' Council, Inc., and a spokesman for building material producers, said he had understood the conference was to be a cooperative industry-labor-government undertaking.

"Cooperation? You Take This!"

"The cooperation amounted to this," he complained. "We were told: 'Here's a priority program and you are going to take it.'"

Both Northup and Whitlock insisted that the primary construction bottleneck was the "unrealistic price policy" of the office of price administration. Every time the price question was raised, said Northup, government officials replied this was a matter to be handled by Wilson Wyatt, former mayor of Louisville, who will become government housing expediter on Jan. 1.

Whitlock asserted that the new government regulation to channel 50 per cent of building materials to home construction actually would be used to fix prices on houses.

Two Objectives Sought

In asserting purposes of the conference had been attained, John B. Blandford Jr., national housing administrator, said these were two-fold:

1. To share government information about the housing shortage with management and labor in the construction industry.

2. To review government plans to stimulate home construction.

Whitlock said the construction industry considered the new program objectionable, but "will cooperate as best we can." He asserted that the government plan should have been discussed with an industry advisory committee before it was announced by President Truman.

Altho he pledged industry cooperation, Whitlock said in effect that the government would have to take responsibility for the outcome—having initiated the program.

Consultation Promised

Replying to Whitlock's criticism, John D. Small, civilian production administrator, said various segments of the construction industry would be consulted on details of the program. Only the general outline has been announced, he said.

The program provides for earmarking 50 per cent of all building supplies for homes costing $10,000 or less, plus administration indorsement of legislation to fix price ceilings on new and existing houses.

A spokesman for the NHA reported that labor and management delegates had agreed to appoint a committee to work with the office of war mobilization and reconversion on home building.

Meanwhile, an associate of Reconversion Director Snyder said "some sort of quality controls" would be provided in new building materials regulations, to assure home buyers their money's worth.

MIDLAND BACKS INDIANA UTILITY PLAN AT HEARING

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 18 (AP)—Transactions in the proposed corporate simplification plan of Indiana Public Service company, Fort Wayne, today were termed "a fair deal to all concerned." Jay Samuel Hartt, president of Midland Utilities company, Indiana's parent, testified at a securities and exchange commission hearing.

The plan calls for Midland's sale to American Gas and Electric company of new Indiana common stock for 4½ million dollars. Thru a verbal agreement with a preferred stock holders committee of Indiana, said Hartt, Midland will receive 3 million cash and 50 per cent of over-accruals on taxes, a total of $3,143,500, with the balance going to preferred holders.

Effecting the plan "will place Midland in a position where it can be entirely liquidated within a very short period of time," he said. The outstanding 13,706 shares of 7 per cent cumulative preferred and 16,622 shares of 6 per cent perferred would be exchanged for new common and the 738,000 common shares canceled.

Use of War Prisoners in Industry

Council Group Votes to Take Vet Home Aid

The city council committee on housing, headed by Ald. Lindell [9th], voted yesterday to accept an offer of $4,300,000 from the state housing board to build veterans' housing projects in three Chicago locations. The action must be ratified by the council.

Miss Elizabeth Wood, executive secretary of the Chicago housing authority, said that the money, Chicago's share of state slum clearance funds, is expected to be officially tendered the city after a meeting of the state board later this week.

Backs Fund for City

Temple MacFayden, chairman of the state board, said recently he would recommend that the board turn over the money to the city.

Lindell said that plans provide for spending the money to build apartments and row housing in the vicinity of Roosevelt rd. and Ashland av., Roosevelt rd. and Blue Island av., and 37th st. and Vincennes av. As soon as the money is turned over to the city, steps will be taken to acquire the necessary land, said Miss Wood.

Vets' Home Rental Rates

Temporary houses under construction at Foster and Tripp avs. for war veterans and their families will rent from $27.50 to $37.50 a month, said John Joseph Ryan, Chicago area office of price administration rent director.

The lower rental has been set as ceiling on one bedroom portable houses; $32.50 on two bedroom houses, and $37.50 on three bedroom houses.

Senate Approves Terms for Sale of Cargo Vessels

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18 (AP)—The senate today approved legislation outlining terms for disposal of an estimated 10 billion dollars worth of surplus war cargo vessels. The bill, passed by the house, requires house assent to several senate changes.

FIRST UNION CAMPAIGN TO WIN EMPLOYES OF NATIONAL BANK LOSES

New York, Dec. 18 [Special]—The first attempt to unionize white collar workers of a national bank has been defeated almost two to one, it was disclosed today. The New York state labor relations board announced employes of the Public National Bank and Trust company voted 601 to 362 against having the American Federation of Office Employes, local 23076 [AFL], represent them as bargaining agent.

Two state banks in New York City are organized, the Federation Bank and Trust company and the Amalgamated Bank of America.

JUDGE GRANTS ANOTHER DELAY IN A. & P. CASE

Danville, Ill., Dec. 18 (AP)—Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley today granted the government a second continuance to prepare its brief against the New York Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company and 28 officers and subsidiaries charged with violation of anti-trust laws in a long trial held this year.

Holmes Baldridge, chief of the department of justice anti-trust division litigation section, said the government could not prepare the type of brief it wished on evidence and law by Jan. 17, the date set.

Judge Lindley changed the date for filing the brief from Jan. 17 to Jan. 28, for oral closing arguments from Jan. 28 to Feb. 25, and for reply briefs from Feb. 27 to March 27.

United Air Receives 14 C-54 Planes to Convert

New York, Dec. 18 (AP)—United Air Lines has received 14 four engined 220 mile an hour Douglas C-54 planes that are being converted for passenger-cargo service to begin early next year, J. A. Herlihy, vice president in charge of operations, said today. They were bought from the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

Cudahy Profit Cut by Volume Dip, Cost Rise

Cudahy Packing company net earnings in its fiscal year, ended Oct. 27, were cut by higher wages and live stock prices and a reduction in slaughter volume, E. A. Cudahy, chairman, yesterday told stockholders in his annual report. A 17.8 per cent drop in dollar sales was attributed largely to the decrease in number of hogs sent to market.

E. A. Cudahy

Net income fell to $2,505,097, or $4.12 a share, from $3,190,061, or $5.58 a share, in the 1944 fiscal year. Sales and revenues slid to $344,909,000 from $419,618,000. Tonnage decreased 23.9 per cent.

Taxes Decrease Also

Operating profit slumped to $7,921,000 from $13,132,000 and requirements for federal taxes were reduced to $9.77 a share from $18.03 the preceding year. Federal, state, and all other direct taxes totaled $6,644,236, against $10,680,279.

Working capital increased during the year from $30,049,000 to $32,652,000, he said. Long term debt was trimmed ½ million dollars to 17 millions, the least since 1921.

Cudahy said increased live stock costs were accompanied by "very few" compensating upward adjustments in ceiling prices of finished products. Hog costs rose 88 cents per live hundredweight, cattle 56 cents, calves 24 cents, and sheep and lambs 2 cents.

Producer Outlook Discussed

Unit returns to cattle raisers probably will be smaller in 1946 than this year, he said. Hog prices in 1946 may average nearly as high tho prices may decline from current levels during peak winter marketings.

"Consumer expenditures for food in 1946 will not be much less than in 1945 and, with a large proportion of the population receiving comparatively high incomes, demand for the better grades of beef will continue exceptionally strong," said Cudahy.

Woman Heads Big N. Y. Store—Lord & Taylor

New York, Dec. 18 [Special]—Resignation of Walter Hoving as president of Lord & Taylor, large department store, and the election of Miss Dorothy Shaver, 1st vice president, to succeed him, were announced today by Robert J. McKim, president of Associated Dry Goods corporation, which owns 90 per cent of the Lord & Taylor capital stock. Hoving, whose resignation is effective Jan. 5, said he had been asked to form a new nation-wide amalgamation of department stores and other retail properties.

RAIL RECOVERY BUOYS STOCKS AFTER TUMBLE

Majority of Issues Joins in Rally

New York, Dec. 18 [Special]—The stock market rallied today to recover part of the losses taken in yesterday's most severe break since April, 1943. Railroads were especially strong, as a majority of the 918 issues traded registered advances of fractions to 2 points. Some leaders, however, slumped again. Trade shrank to 1,350,000 shares from 1,990,000 the preceding day.

Commitments were reinstated by most traders, and some short covering appeared on the idea that the relapse had substantially bettered the technical position of the list after its recent climb to highs since early 1931. Some customers trimmed holdings further and others held aloof to await developments in strikebound areas.

Steels, motors, amusements, and aircrafts shared the recovery leadership taken by rails. The Associated Press 60 stock average rose 0.5, mainly on a rally of 0.8 in the carriers. Gains numbered 523, losses 256, and 139 issues were unchanged.

BOND MARKET MIXED

New York, Dec. 18 (AP)—The bond market closed mixed today after early irregularity. Rails rose fractions to more than a point in the forenoon. A selloff overtook many shortly after noon and lower prices prevailed until a final push landed a majority back in the plus column with gains up to 2 points. Utilities and industrials were quiet and little changed.

CHICAGO LIST IRREGULAR

Prices closed irregular and turnover shrank to 40,000 shares yesterday on the Chicago Stock exchange. More active issues included Admiral, up ½; Consolidated Biscuit and Central and South West Utilities, each up ⅝; Automatic Washer and Kellogg Switchboard, each up ¼, and Asbestos Manufacturing, unchanged.

Unrestricted Ship-Shore Radio Will Return Jan. 1

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18 (AP)—Commercial radio communications between merchant ships and radio shore stations in the United States, banned during the war for the security and safety of ships at sea, will be resumed on an unrestricted basis Jan. 1, the navy announced today.

Charges Army Still Exports Lumber Despite Home Needs

BY THOMAS FURLONG

The army still is shipping lumber overseas altho the acute shortage in this country is holding up critically needed residential construction, Boris Shiskin, economist of the AFL, said yesterday. It also is reluctant to put back into commercial channels its surplus lumber supplies, he asserted at a conference on reconversion in the Public Administration Clearing house, 1313 E. 60th st.

The army holds that the lumber leaving the country is needed for military installations abroad, Shiskin said. He listed England, Australia, and Spain as some of the foreign countries to which American lumber is being shipped. Part of it is in the form of semi-finished knockdown assembly units.

Expects 540,000 Home Units

Participating in the discussion of housing and other reconversion questions were Lincoln Fairley, research associate of the CIO United Automobile Workers, and Walter Blucher, president of the American Society of Planning Officials.

Shiskin estimated that 540,000 new residential units would be completed in 1946 at an average cost of about $6,000 each. About 165,000 units will be started in the first quarter with a peak of 185,000 on which work is expected to begin in the third quarter.

The program would not channel enough of the available materials into residential construction, he said, urging that 70 per cent of all materials be reserved for home building instead of 50 per cent as in the administration plan.

Shiskin said many of the building trades unions planned to offer to increase their present 6 hour day to 8 hours without asking premium wage rates for the additional time. Simultaneously, however, many of them will press for a general 15 per cent increase in wages.

Building workers also will accept a six day week instead of the pre-war 5 days, in some cases at straight wage rates and in others at time and a half for Sunday work, he said.

Pessimistic on Slum Clearing

Blucher presented a dismal outlook for urban slum reclamation. He said municipalities as yet have not faced the real problem—described as erecting housing that people can afford. He termed the public works planned to date "mere chicken feed."

Fairley represented big American corporations as lining up to block wage increases which he said were needed merely to maintain pre-war living standards. He expressed apprehension that a prolonged congressional debate on the British loan would injure Russia's chances of getting an American loan.

The forum discussion was directed by Herbert Emmerich, director of the clearing house.

RAIL'S ABILITY TO PAY FIXED CHARGES HELD NO TEST OF CONDITION

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18 (AP)—The interstate commerce commission took the position today that merely because a railroad met its fixed charges the last seven years was no guarantee it is in good financial condition.

Thru its legislative committee, headed by Commissioner Walter M. W. Splawn, the ICC opposed a bill by Rep. Reed [R., Ill.] permitting any railroad in receivership to be returned to its stockholders for a trial period of 18 months if it met its fixed charges the preceding seven years.

"The current seven year average period includes all the war years," it said. "During this period earnings have been abnormally high."

Futures Market to Close Monday; Cash Grain Open

The Chicago Board of Trade yesterday announced its grain futures market will be closed next Monday, but the cash grain market will be open as usual.

FIRST NATIONAL VOTES DIVIDEND OF 20% IN STOCK

Shareholders of the First National Bank of Chicago yesterday authorized an increase in the bank's capital stock from 50 million to 60 million dollars and the distribution of the additional stock as a dividend to shareholders of record Dec. 15.

The distribution, representing a dividend of 20 per cent, will be made as soon as the approval of the controler of the currency is obtained, said Edward E. Brown, chairman of the board. He said directors plan to maintain the present $8 annual dividend rate on the increased total of shares.

The stock was increased by the transfer of 10 million dollars from the surplus account, which will be replenished by a like amount which will be drawn from undivided surplus.

November Fire Losses at 15 Year Top for Month

New York, Dec. 18 (AP)—W. E. Mallalieu, general manager of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, today said estimated fire losses in the United States last month were $37,393,000, the highest for November in 15 years.

HELP INDUSTRY PLAN OUTPUT, FARMERS TOLD

Anderson Advises Keeping Parity

The farmer's part in the drive for high production and full employment is "to get together with industry and labor and talk about national goals, national policies, and unified planning toward all-out prosperity," Secretary of Agriculture Anderson said yesterday. He addressed the American Farm Bureau federation's annual convention in the Hotel Sherman.

Secretary Anderson

"The goals for 1946, crop by crop, and almost acre by acre, thruout the entire farm economy point the way toward what we should do to achieve full production," he said. "We know exactly how many acres of sugar beets, how many acres of early potatoes, how much of other crops and live stock we need to feed this country on a decent basis and take care of obligations abroad.

Says Farmers Know Needs

"Farmers could walk into a conference now and indicate to industry exactly what they are ready to produce and, by the same token, about what they would be ready to consume. They know how many tractors, how many trucks, how many milking machines, and how many hay balers they would like to have. They could present concrete, specific examples of what lies ahead, both for industry and agriculture.

"Now why wouldn't the same principle work all the way around? Can industry tell how many radios, how many suits of clothing, and how many automobiles this country is ready to produce in 1946? We believe that the farmers of this country are ready to lead the way into a new period of economic cooperation aiming toward full production and full employment."

Produces Strange Results

Anderson said the farmer should hold firmly to the parity principle, his first and to date his best measure of the balance of agriculture in the whole economy. Present parity formulas, however, "produce some strange results when applied to the high powered modern agriculture we have in 1945," he said. For example, milk is at about 109 per cent of parity, and production is inadequate; at 90 per cent many

is the date on which your will is to be read

A man's imagination falters when he considers the reading of his own will. But truly here is where he needs most vision, most foresight, and most imagination. If yours is a will that "bequeaths and devises", it may be inadequate a year after it is written. But if it establishes a trust, with your wishes adequately set forth, and with flexible provisions for fulfilling them—your will can live and function as if you were here.

For many men, a Living Trust is a will-in-action during their lifetime. They set in motion the purposes they wish accomplished, and are here to guide and counsel the men who will be their trustees.

Our Trust Officers will gladly discuss the varied and comprehensive forms of Living Trusts with you.

"What Your Heirs Can Never Tell You" is a brilliant book by the noted financial writer, William L. Ayers. In homey, readable style he reveals what has happened and can happen to wills—with pointers about yours. Send for a copy.

AUTO OWNERS ASK FOR 6, 7 IN 1946 TAGS

13s Go Begging, State Secretary Says

Everything's at sixes and sevens in Secretary of State Edward J. Barrett's office, Barrett reported yesterday. He meant, he said, that those two numbers are most popular among motorists who like to select their own license plate numbers.

Some 75,000 of the new maroon and white tags for 1946 already have been mailed to drivers who had the same numbers in 1945 and requested reassignments. Additional mailings have been suspended until after the holidays, Barrett said.

50,000 for 10,000 Numbers

Barrett said the state automobile department in November received 250,000 requests for reassignments and for special numbers. Many applicants were disappointed. Fifty thousand requests were received for the first 10,000 numbers.

While combinations involving sixes and sevens were popular, 13s generally went begging. The No. 1 plate again went to Stuyvesant Peabody, Chicago coal operator, who has held it since 1943.

No. 2 plates went to Henry W. Austin, 167 Forest av., Oak Park; No. 4 to C. M. Hayes, 483 Sheridan rd., Winnetka, president of the Chicago Motor club; No. 9 to the Rev. Preston Bradley, president of the People's church of Chicago, and No. 21 to Barrett.

Other Chicagoans Low

No. 3—Mrs. W. B. Hughes, Springfield.
No. 5—W. E. C. Clifford, Champaign.
No. 6—H. B. Barthoff, Springfield.
No. 7—Mrs. J. O. Oglesby, Springfield.
No. 8—Mary Leigh Call, Springfield.
No. 10—T. D. Vredenburg II., Springfield.
No. 11—J. J. Cavanagh, 4944 Woodlawn av.
No. 12—R. D. Keehn, Lake Forest.
No. 13—D. H. Montgomery, Springfield.
No. 14—E. G. Warren, Riverside.
No. 15—G. F. Ross, 3234 Washington blvd.
No. 16—A. A. Frank, 800 Sheridan rd., Evanston.
No. 17—H. G. Watson, Mount Vernon.
No. 18—Mrs. H. H. Upham, 1260 Astor st.
No. 19—J. T. McCutcheon, 2450 Lake View av.
No. 20—R. J. Barr, Joliet.

The first thefts of 1946 plates were announced by Police Capt. George Teeling of the stolen automobile detail. The victims were M. N. Kahn, 5555 Everett av., license 14-248, and Peter Stathes, 3718 Grenshaw st., license 101-687.

REPORT FISH IN STORAGE AT RECORD HIGH

The threat of a fish shortage this winter has been eliminated, industry spokesmen said yesterday. The tendency, they pointed out, is in the other direction. United States fish and wild life service records show fish and shellfish in cold storage in the United States and Alaska Dec. 1 totaled 148 million pounds, an all-time record.

Fears of a shortage resulted from heavy demands that caused stocks to decline below normal last spring. Increase in stocks is attributed to the end of meat rationing and an increase in production capacity resulting from release of vessels requisitioned for the navy and improvement in man power.

The heavy stocks will help to offset the seasonal drop in production now in progress. Thrifty housewives were told the available supply of smelt has driven the price below ceiling levels. Cod fillets also were listed as economical.

MEIGS DEPARTS TO REPORT ON AIR BASE TOUR

Merrill C. Meigs, chairman of the Chicago aero commission and head of the mayor's airport selection committee, will leave Chicago today to report to Secretary of War Patterson on a recently completed 29,000 mile trip inspecting American air bases and surpluses.

Meigs was civilian representative of the war secretary on the trip with Maj. Gen. E. M. Powers, head of army aircraft procurement. He declined to comment on the results of the trip, which ended Sunday, until he has reported to Patterson.

Meigs reported that confusion at air bases exists because of rapid discharge of experts in radio, radar, and chemistry, and because training of replacements is a slow process. He praised the coöperation offered at bases around the world.

Gen. Rogers Appointed Surgeon General Here

Appointment of Brig. Gen. John A. Rogers, to be surgeon general for the 6th service command, was announced yesterday in Chicago by Maj. Gen. David McCoach Jr., commanding officer. Gen. Rogers, who was chief surgeon for the American 1st army in Europe, succeeds Col. Donald G. Hilldrup, who has been transferred to Fort Sill, Okla. The 6th service command embraces Illinois, Wisconsin, and Michigan.

'Share Ride' Honor Won by Harvester

HUGE CARGO OF SERUM GOES THRU CHICAGO

More than four and one-half tons of typhus and diphtheria vaccine, en route from New York and Toledo to Shanghai, China, was flown thru Chicago last night on United Air Lines cargo planes. It was one of the largest such movements in air line history.

Approximately 5,800 pounds of the vaccine were dispatched by the united nations relief and rehabilitation administration from New York and 3,700 pounds from Toledo. The United Air Lines planes will deliver the cargo to San Francisco, Cal., where it will be picked up by military planes and flown across the Pacific.

UNRRA officials at Washington said there is no epidemic of the diseases in China but that the vaccine is being rushed there as a precautionary measure.

COUNTY HEARS PUBLIC TODAY ON BIG BUDGET

A public hearing is to be held today on Cook county's proposed 1946 budget, tentatively set at $25,738,000. The appropriations, which include a 10 per cent pay raise for all employes, are the largest in the county's history. Among large items are $800,000 for repairing county properties and a million dollars for election expense. Daniel Ryan, chairman of the county board's finance committee, indicated that the budget, after final revisions, will be adopted before Jan. 1.
